TREASURY MEASURE AN IMMENSE RELIEF

New York Financiers Believe Bond Issue and Credit Certificates Will Dissolve the Crisis

PRESIDENT'S APPROVAL OF MEASURES

New York, Nov. 18.—The announcement of the plan of President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou to issue $50,000,000 in Panama bonds and $100,000,000 one year treasury certificates bearing three per cent interest was the chief topic of discussion in financial circles here today. Short term certificates attracted most of the discussion because of the comparative novelty of such an issue in this country.

It is the general opinion that the two measures, and especially the offer of the certificates, will draw much money from small hoards as was the case in 1896, because these certificates would be acceptable at the bank of France if it should be necessary to procure more gold, according to plans that were under discussion last week.

Some bankers here, however, believe that the issue of the certificates will make it unnecessary to procure more gold. If the premium on currency is once broken it will change conditions of foreign exchange so that the profit on gold imports will be reduced or will be paid out.

Fear Gold May Be Taken Back.

Some bankers believed that this will not be an unmixed evil, because we have already drawn so much gold from Europe. They fear that this gold will be taken back soon under the pressure of high discount rates and the monetary stringency at London, Paris and Berlin, and they believe that the American market should cease to disturb European markets when it is found that further imports of gold are not required to maintain our position. While the certificates therefore, undoubtedly would be an acceptable security if gold were to be taken from the bank of France, and negotiations to that end may be renewed, they may have the effect of making further imports unnecessary.

Explaining the uses to which the new treasury certificates will be put, Charles A. Conant, an authority on currency issues and former treasurer of the Morton Trust company, said:

"I believe the action of the president and Secretary Cortelyou is a wise one. The issue of short term certificates to the amount of 100,000,000 might be criticised on the ground that it is more than the occasion requires, but in my opinion it is better in such emergencies to take such precautions rather than inadequate ones. In 1893 while the measures taken were sound, they were nearly always delayed until the situation was desperate and thus seriously aggravating the evil.

"The new certificates, will not, of course, circulate as money because they bear interest. They represent a very different financial policy than the issue of legal tender notes which would have inflated currency without any provision for retirement."

BRYAN LOOMS BIG IN INDIANA TOWN

Lafayette Has Biggest Day in Her History, With Immense Crowd of Democrats to Greet Leader

HAS NOTHING TO SAY AS TO CANDIDACY

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 18.—This is one of the greatest days this city has ever known. This is the real Bryan day. All others are base imitations.

Mr. Bryan came here yesterday and what, with speeches, lectures and talks at schools, colleges, churches and public institutions, he was the busy one.

A year has made him look better, and almost younger than when he was here before. To be sure, there is a little more snow hair at his temples and he looks heavier in the waist coat, but he is the same William Jennings Bryan.

And the cry of the muezzin has called the faithful to him. And it was glad tidings to the faithful when he announced that he could be provoked into again accepting the nomination for president.

Crowds Pour In.

Beginning last night the crowds poured into this city. Today every steam and electric road has added its quota, democrats from all parts of the state coming in to swell the gathering and to pay tribute to the man who it now seems certain will be the national standard bearer of his party next year.

While Mr. Bryan has made several addresses, none of them political, since arriving here yesterday, his most important utterances are reserved for the big banquet tonight, when from 600 to 800 democrats will gather at the tables under the eyes of several thousands more who will merely look on and listen and join in the cheering.

Crowd Below Estimates.

Though the meeting here today in importance has the significance of a state affair, in numbers it has fallen below the estimate of some of the enthusiasts. Mr. Bryan at the Sunday meetings spoke to several thousand people, but they were all from this city. At 2 o'clock Mr. Bryan met the democratic editors of the Tenth district and had a heart to heart talk with them. Some time ago the editors of the district indorsed Mr. Bryan for the presidential nomination and he took this occasion to give them his thanks. But not even to them did he say more about being a candidate for president than he said several days ago.

Mr. Bryan also had a conference with the county chairmen of the Tenth district this afternoon. He did not give them a lot of advice, as the republicans here are saying, but he got a lot of information from them.

The banquet tonight will consist of about seven hundred plates, of which forty-five are at the speaker's table, but it is probable that Mr. Bryan will have an audience of about three thousand persons.

Had a Busy Sunday.

Mr Bryan reached Lafayette about 1 o'clock Sunday and was greeted by a reception committee and taken to the home of James Kirby Risk, whose guest he will be during his stay in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Risk gave an informal dinner for Mr. Bryan, at which there were a few invited guests. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Bryan talked to a great crowd at the Coliseum under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., and while his subject was "Prince of Peace," he spoke of his repugnance of tainted money. But no politics did he utter. In the evening he made another address and after the meeting did a good deal of hand shaking. His night subject was "Missions," and he told of his travels in Europe, but no politics.

Weather Becomes Propitious.

Early this morning a cloud of fog hung over Lafayette and there were signs of rain, but about nine o'clock the sun passed the fog away, the decorations were hung for the buildings and the bands began to play and the great Bryan-Risk day was on. Mr. Bryan was up bright and early. He did not go to the state soldiers' home as was arranged, but made an interesting talk to the students at Purdue and late this afternoon held a reception at the Lahr hotel.

There is a great crowd here. They began coming in on the early trains and interurbans and have been arriving all day. Not a few of the visitors are women. A lot of autos were lined up in front of the hotels and these were used by the citizens of Lafayette to carry the visitors over the town.

Nothing New as to Candidacy.

There will be some disappointed democrats here tonight when Mr. Bryan is through talking, for he is not going to elaborate on what he has already said concerning his presidential aspirations. He said today that he had explained his position fully and he saw no need of adding anything to it at this time.

"Then your address this evening will not have any keynote significance attached?" was suggested to Mr. Bryan.

"Oh no, I will just make a plain talk to the democrats, saying nothing about myself."

DEFENSE BEGINS ITS TESTIMONY FOR WOMAN

Witnesses in Bradley Trial Tell of State of Mind After Shooting.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, on trial on the charge of shooting and killing former United States Senator Arthur Brown, of Utah, today listened to testimony regarding her sanity at the time of the tragedy and the story of premature births while she was living in Salt Lake City, beginning in the summer of 1901. Newspaper men and police officers who saw the prisoner immediately after the tragedy, and her attending physician, during part of her residence in Salt Lake, were the witnesses.

The defense sought to show that the defendant was insane at the time of the shooting of the former senator, but while there was ample evidence of an excited frame of mind, rambling talk and denial of coming to Washington with the intention of shooting and suspicion on the part of one of the witnesses that she was insane, there was no direct opinion expressed that she was insane at the time the deed was committed.

Dr. E. W. Whitney, of Salt Lake, who testified to having treated her in three separate instances of premature births and who said he had made anatomical studies of the subject of nerves, was closely questioned regarding her condition during the times she was under his care at the hospital and at her home and an unsuccessful effort was made by the defense to establish the identity of the person who accompanied her to the doctor's office on one of these occasions. Dr. Whitney testified that septicemia, such as had resulted from her condition at the time he had treated her, would probably leave a permanent injury to the system, including the blood cells of the brain.

Surrounded by Her Friends.

Mrs. Bradley found herself surrounded by friends when she went into court today to begin the second week of her trial.

The court room was full of witnesses for the defense, who had been asked to be present today in view of the prospect of beginning the taking of testimony in her former home in Salt Lake City for that purpose. In this class were included: Dr. Eugene Whitney, who is expected to support Attorney Hoover's statement that Mr. Brown had been responsible for criminal operations on the woman; Lyon Shrewsbury, the husband of an aunt of Mrs. Bradley, who became insane; Mrs. Madison, Mrs. Bradley's mother, and Judge N. H. Kaigh, Judge J. H. P. Henderson, Arthur Barnes and Col. King, all of whom are attorneys of Salt Lake City, and are said to be familiar with different phases of the relationship between Brown and Mrs. Bradley.

It was stated before the trial began that the first witnesses introduced in Mrs. Bradley's behalf would be Wash-

PRESSMEN IN STRIKE TO ENFORCE AN 8-HOUR DAY

Some Fort Wayne Printing Concerns Affected by Labor Trouble.

Pressmen and feeders in five Fort Wayne job printing concerns went on strike today to enforce the demand for an eight-hour day, and it is said that from thirty-five to forty men are out, the strike affecting the Singmaster Printing company, the Archer Printing company, the Page Printing company, the Globe Printing company and the Fort Wayne Printing company. All the newspaper offices and remainder of the job printing establishments of the city conceded the eight-hour day and their men are at work as usual.

The strike is national in character and was ordered by the international body of the Pressmen's union. Notification was sent to the various offices a few weeks ago that the eight-hour day would go into effect November 18, and in all cases where an agreement was not signified the union pressmen and feeders did not return to work today. The striking mechanics have established headquarters in the Bank block, and the executive committee is composed of President Louis Waltemath, Martin Rowan, James Ligget, jr., Kemp Baker and Charles Clippenger. The workmen express confidence that the justice of their cause will soon be conceded by their employers.

The latter on the other hand do not believe the strike was warranted, and assert that in April last a wage adjustment was entered into with the pressmen on a verbal agreement with the tacit understanding that there was to be no further demand for either increased salaries or shorters hours before January 1, 1909. The workmen are asking no wage advance at this time, but a shortening of the work day from nine hours to eight.

The strike has practically tied up the offices affected so far as anything like a normal volume of work is concerned, though in some instances the managers say they are getting out the rush work and will take care of all urgent business with very little delay.

J., where they are to be entombed with the body of Mrs. McLaughlin, which has been kept in a vault in this city since her death two years ago.

FORT WAYNE MEN HOME FROM TRIP TO EUROPE

J. H. Bass, William Geake and L. A. Centlivre Spent Month in London.

Hohe from a business trip to Europe in the course of which they spent nearly a month in London, Messrs. J. H. Bass, William Geake and L. A. Centlivre arrived in Fort Wayne this morning. All were well and stated that the trip had been not only pleasant, but profitable.

Something over four weeks ago the three gentlemen sailed on a business mission in which they are interested, and in London they were joined by Henry Horstman, who is interested with them in a process for the extraction of gold and other precious metals from ores. Mr. Horstman will return to America in about two weeks, and will then sail for Australia.

The trip from New York to Liverpool was made in the new fast steamship Lusitania, and it is described as a floating palace. "There is no possible excuse for getting seasick aboard the Lusitania," said Mr. Geake this morning, "for even at the terrific speed at which it travels, one is often puzzled as he is seated in the cabins to detect any movement whatever in the great vessel." Returning the party were passengers on the Coronia.

NEW YORK HORSE SHOW OPENS.

Society's Inaugural Function Starts in the Usual Way.

New York, Nov. 18.—The twenty-third annual horse show opened this morning at Madison Square Garden and all this week wealth and fashion will vie with the equine aristocracy of the country in attracting attention, for it is with the horse show that New York's winter social session customarily begins.

Sixteen classes will be judged during the three sessions today, hunters and jumpers this morning; harness horses this afternoon, and roadsters, saddlers, harness horses and hunters this evening.

DRINK COST HIM THE GOVERNORSHIP OF HIS STATE

A Former Minnesota Congressman on Temperance Platform.

Minnesota, Minn., Nov. 18.—Frank M. Eddy, former congressman from Minnesota, made his first appearance as a temperance lecturer Sunday, when he addressed an attentive audience at the Metropolitan opera house in this city. He said that drink had prevented him from becoming governor of Minnesota. He closed by saying that he had taken the platform as a temperance lecturer, because he realized that it was because such men as he set the example that young men take to drink.

JEFFERSON CLUB GOES TO LAFAYETTE IN FORCE

Big Fort Wayne Delegation Off to Attend Democratic Meeting.

In a special car over the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley traction system at 7 o'clock this morning, the Fort Wayne delegation comprising sixty-seven members of the Jefferson club, left for Lafayette to attend the big democratic meeting in that city.

Streamers on either side of the car bore the inscription, "Jefferson club of Fort Wayne," and in addition to the official delegation the regular cars on the traction line have carried democrats from other northern Indiana cities, who go to do honor to Mr. Bryan and other leaders of democracy at the banquet this evening. John W. Eggeman, of Fort Wayne, is to be one of the speakers at the banquet.

In expectation that the Lafayette hotels will be taxed to the utmost to feed the big crowd of visitors, the Fort Wayne party arranged for a buffet service upon its cars, and the delegation will be served its meals en route. The return from Lafayette will be made tonight at the close of the meeting.

WILL GIVE STAG PARTY.

The St. Aloysius Young Men's society of the St. Mary's church will give a grand stag party in their hall tomorrow evening. The committee which consists of the following persons, Charles Allgeier, chairman; Joseph Schwartz, Edward Violand, Albert Luley, Oscar Ankenbruck, Clement Mettler and George Tholen, have spared neither time nor expense in preparing the program and a most enjoyable time is promised all who may attend.

Edward Bailey and Laura C. Block were married this afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Justice Tancey.

FATALLY SHOT AS HE STEPPED OUT TO SEEK SON

Greenfield Man Killed by Another Who Confesses —Jealousy Cause.

Greenfield, Ind., Nov. 18.—James LaFollette, a butcher, forty-two years old, was murdered last night in the rear of his home in the west part of this city.

Francis Marion Duncan was arrested at noon today charged with the murder. He was taken before the prosecuting attorney and confessed. He is a married man and was formerly deputy marshal.

It is understood his plea will be self defense.

About 7 o'clock LaFollette went out the back way from his home to look for his little boy.

In a few minutes he staggered into his home with blood streaming from a bullet hole in his breast and exclaimed: "I am hurt." Mrs. LaFollette at once sent for her niece, Mrs. Sherman Yeager, who assisted in placing him in a bed. Physicians were summoned, but he died before their arrival.

Neighbors heard the shot and all agree it was in the alley in the rear of the house. One person says he heard a man's voice exclaim: "Stand back," and then the person ran down the alley.

LaFollette was known to be jealous and some time ago he was compelled to give up a large knife which he was carrying as a weapon to be used on a man who was believed to be paying attention to his wife.

WIFE RIFLES POCKETS; COURT GRANTS A DIVORCE

Massachusetts Man Stands for Rights and Proves Cruelty Charge.

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 18.—Because his wife persisted, despite his continued remonstrations, in going through his pockets at night, David Walker has been granted a divorce.

"Persisted and continued intrusion of his wife into the personal affairs, particularly the pockets of the plaintiff, sustain, in the opinion of the court, the charge of cruelty," said Judge Sanborn in granting the decree.

TWO KENTUCKY GENTLEMEN.

They Harbor Ill Feeling; One Gets Off the Earth.

London, Ky., Nov. 18.—Robert Boyd, jr., master commissioner of Laurel county, and a well known attorney, shot and instantly killed James Sparks, one of the ablest lawyers of eastern Kentucky, today. The tragedy occurred in the district clerk's office, where Boyd, as commissioner, was making a settlement in a case which Sparks represented one side. Ill feeling had existed between the men for some time.

ANDERSON REMOVES GLOVES IN TRIAL OF WALSH

Recalcitrant Witnesses Are Taken in Hand by the Honorable Court.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Three blows were dealt the defense in the Walsh trial today at the conclusion of the morning session of the court. All of them came from the bench. Judge Anderson ruled that the books of the different corporations for whose benefit Mr. Walsh is alleged to have taken money from the Chicago National bank were admissable in evidence. He also held that their admission as evidence was no violation of the defendant's constitutional rights. The third ruling was adverse to the objection of the attorneys of the defendant that Bank Examiner Moxey was not competent to explain the meaning of entries in the books of the Chicago National bank.

R. F. Williams, auditor of the Southern Indiana railroad, was the first witness called in the trial of John R. Walsh today. He proved an unwilling witness and his answers and refusals to testify called forth rebukes from Judge Anderson at frequent intervals. Attorney William J. Hines, for the defense, also came in for rebukes from the court while Williams was on the stand.

C. G. Fredericks, auditor of the Bedford Stone Quarries company, was the next witness after Mr. Williams and his answers were not sufficiently explicit to please the government attorneys and the court was compelled to take a hand in directing the witness to make reply, as he had done with Williams.

Defense Alleges Irregularities in Getting Outside Jurors.

Georgetown, Ky., Nov. 18.—After a consultation the defense in the Power's trial at noon filed the expected motion challenging the entire Harrison county venire, including the seven jurors who have already qualified. Accompanying the written motion were a number of exhibits including Power's formal challenge against the deputy sheriffs, affidavits of many Harrison county witnesses and an affidavit of Attorney Wilson himself touching upon the alleged irregularity in summoning the entire venire will be taken up with testimony and arguments on the petition to throw out the entire venire. The prosecution immediately before the filing of the motion announced that the avowal of the commonwealth would be admitted and made a part of the record.

The attendance was larger when court reconvened this morning, than any preceding day. The second section of Harrison county venire, consisting of 100 men, arriving on time and the court began examination touching on their qualifications for jury service.

tificates of indebtedness to such an amount as may be necessary up to $100,000,000 to meet emergencies. The certificates will bear 3 per cent interest and run for one year.

A public statement from Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou and an open letter to him from President Roosevelt lifted the veil of the administration's plans for restoring confidence to the banking world and relieving the financial stringency that has prevailed for the last few weeks. At the same time a great weight has been lifted from the business and industrial interests of the country. The mighty resources of the government are pledged to maintain the integrity of the nation's financial system, and the honor of the government is pledged to protect the interest of all people in the following words of the president:

I appeal to the public to co-operate with us in restoring normal business conditions. The government will see that the people do not suffer if only the people themselves will act in a normal way."

President's Seal of Approval.

The plan adopted was submitted by Secretary Cortelyou and was approved by the president in the following letter:

The White House, Washington, D C., Nov. 17, 1907.—My Dear Mr. Cortelyou: I have considered your proposal. I approve the issue of the $50,000,000 of Panama bonds, which will be immediately available as the basis for additional currency. I also approve the issue of $100,000,000, or so much as you may find necessary, of $50 3 per cent interest bearing government notes, the proceeds of the sale of which can be at once deposited by you where the greatest need exists, and especially in the west and south, where the crops have to be moved.

I have assurance that the leaders of congress are considering a currency bill which will meet in permanent fashion the needs of the situation, and which I believe will be passed at as early date after congress convenes, two weeks hence.

Country's Prosperity Unequaled.

What is most needed just at present is that our citizens should realize how fundamentally sound business conditions in this country are, and how absurd it is to permit themselves to get into a panic and create a stringency by hording their savings instead of trusting perfectly sound banks.

There is no particle of risk involved in letting business take its natural course, and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding.

The banks and trust companies are solvent. There is more currency in the country today than there was a month ago, when the supply was ample; $55,000,000 in gold has been imported and the government has deposited another $60,000,000.

These are facts: and I appeal to the public to co-operate with us in restoring normal business conditions. The government will see that the people do not suffer if only the people themselves will act in a normal way. Crops are good and business conditions are sound; and we should put the money we have into circulation in order to meet the needs of our abounding prosperity.

No Analogy With '93 Conditions.

There is no analogy at all with the way things were in 1893. On Nov. 30 of that year there was in the treasury but $161,000,000 in gold. On Nov. 14 of this year there was in the treasury $904,000,000 of gold. Ten years ago the circulation per capita was $23.33. It is now $33.23. The steps that you now take, the ability of the government to back them up, and the fact that not a particle of risk is involved therein gives the fullest guarantees of the sound conditions of our treasury.

Al that our people have to do now is to go ahead with their normal business in a normal fashion, and the whole difficulty disappears; and this end will be achieved at once if each man will act as he normally does act, and as the real conditions of the country's business fully warrant his acting.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Hon. George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury.

How Bonds Can Be Bought.

The treasury circular inviting proposals for Panama canal bonds reads as follows:

Treasury Department, Office of the Secretary, Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The secretary of the treasury offers to the public $50,000,000 of the bonds of the Panama canal loan authorized by section 8 of the act approved June 28, 1902, and supplanted by section 1 of the act of Dec. 21, 1905. Both acts are quoted below.

The bonds will bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent per annum, will be dated Aug. 1, 1906, and the interest will be paid quarterly on the first days of November, February, May and August.

They will be issued in denominations of $20, $100, and $1,000 of coupon bonds, and of $20, $100, $1,000 and $10,000 of registered bonds They will be redeemable in United States gold coin at the pleasure of the United States, after ten years from the date of their issue, and will be payable thirty years from such date.

They will be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under state, municipal, or local authority.

They will be available to national banks as security for circulating notes upon the same terms as the 2 per cent consols of 1930—to wit: The semi-annual tax upon circulating notes based upon the said bonds as security will be one-fourth of 1 per centum. They will be receivable, like all other United States bonds, as security for public deposits in national banks.

The law forbids their sale at less than par and provides that all citizens of the United States shall have equal opportunity to subscribe therefor.

Bidding Ends on Nov. 30.

"In pursuance of the above announcement the secretary invites bids for the bonds heretofore described, which must be submitted to this department on or before the 30th of November, 1907.

Each bid should state the amount of bonds desired by the subscriber whether coupon or registered, the price he is willing to pay, and the place where he desires to make payment—whether at the treasury of the United States or at the office of some of the assistant treasurers at New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, New Orleans, or San Francisco.

All bids should be addressed to the secretary of the treasury, division of loans and currency, and the envelopes inclosing them should be plainly marked 'Bids for Panama Canal Bonds.'

Upon receipt and classification of the bids hereby invited the successful bidders will be advised of the acceptance of their bids, and they will be instructed as to the date upon which payment is desired to be made at the treasury or some subtreasury of the United States.

Small Bids Get Priority.

In considering bids, the bidders offering the highest prices will receive the first allotment. Of two or more bidders offering the same price, those asking for the smaller amounts of bonds will receive priority in allotment. The department reserves the right to permit bidders offering the highest prices to increase the amount of their purchases.

For the sake of uniformity the bonds will be dated Aug. 1, 1906, which is the date of the outstanding Panama canal bonds, but interest on the bonds of this issue will begin Nov. 1, 1907, and bidders will be required to pay accrued interest on their bonds from that date to the date of payment.

The department also reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if deemed to be to the interests of the United States so to do. The bonds will be ready for delivery upon receipt of payment therefor.

Prospective bidders desiring information not contained in this circular may address the secretary of the treasury, division of loans and currency, Washington, D. C., the assistant treasurers at Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, or San Francisco.

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU,
Secretary.

FINANCIERS APPROVE IT.

New York Bankers Almost Unanimously Favor Treasury Measures.

New York, Nov. 18.—Bankers, capitalists and financiers here today approve the action of Secretary Cortelyou in issuing $50,000,000 of Panama bonds and $100,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness for the relief of the financial stringency. The issue, it was the general opinion, is bound to have beneficial results.

The issue of temporary receipts, it is expected, will immediately relieve the currency scarcity and banish the premium on cash. The putting out of this government security in small denominations is a good move, it is believed, as it will attract from its hiding places much of the currency which has been taken out of circulation by timid bank depositors.

One suggestion as to the effective use to which the new issue may be put was made by an international banker. He expressed the opinion that a large proportion of the new bonds would find their way to France, and in exchange we would get some of the millions of French gold which the Bank of France has already expressed its willingness to allow to flow towards these shores, provided it had some sort of government guarantee of its security.

Some of the Expressions.

Some of the favorite expressions regarding the governments action follow:

Leslie M. Shaw, president of the Carnegie Trust company and ex-secretary of the treasury:

"I thoroughly approve of both measures and expect most beneficial results therefrom."

Frank A. Vanderlip, vice president of the National City bank:

"I regard the action as admirable and I believe that it fully meets the necessities of the present situation. It ought to cause an immediate disappearance of the premium on currency. The main relief will come from the short term notes."

Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Like Insurance society:

"It will have a very healthful effect."

J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National bank:

"It can hardly fail to bring a much needed financial relief."

Wm. A. Nash, president of the Corn Exchange bank:

"The action of Secretary Cortelyou will not only do a great deal of good here in the present financial stringency, but it will tend to establish American credit upon a firmer basis in England, France and Germany, showing as it does, that we are willing and able to handle the situation here at home through our own government."

Clews Takes Another View.

A partially dissenting view was given by Henry Clews. He disapproves the issue of the certificates of indebtedness. Mr. Clews said:

"The issue of $50,000,000 Panama Canal bonds is a good measure for restoration of confidence that, with the $65,000,000 we have imported in gold, should give us enough money and more. I question the legality of the certificates of indebtedness, and I believe their issue is ill-advised and may prove very injurious. We have money enough what we need is more confidence. The Panama bonds would have to be issued sooner or later, but there is no valid excuse for the resort to a war measure in time of peace. Inflation at this time will only weaken the money the government is backing, and a flood of certificates is liable to drive out the gold we have imported.

HIGHEST AWARDS

On Cocoa and Chocolate Made to Walter Baker & Co., Limited.

The jury on food exhibits at the Jamestown Exposition have awarded to Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., a gold medal for "Chocolate Preparations, Breakfast Cocoa and Cocoa Butter," and also a gold medal for "most admirable, effective and artistic installation of exhibit."

This makes the fiftieth highest award from the leading international and local expositions in this country and Europe for the superiority of the cocoa and chocolate preparations manufactured by the Baker company. No other food product has a like record.

It is an interesting fact that the sales of cocoa and chocolate made by this concern go on increasing from year to year more than five times as fast as the increase in the population of this country.

KILLED THE WRONG MAN!

So Says Jealous Husband When He Learns Identity of Victim.

Webb City, Mo., Nov. 18.—"I killed the wrong man," Henry Lacey, foreman of the American Beauty mine, told the coroner's jury which Saturday night held him for slaying W. W. Parker, a young miner who boarded at the Lacey home. "I thought I was shooting at another man, and I intended to kill both him and my wife."

Parker was killed at Lacey's home the night before. About dusk Lacey, who is suffering from tuberculosis, passed a miner smoking at his gate. "I am going into the house and raise a little smoke," he said. Then he opened the front door and fired a revolver. Parker fell dead. Immediately Lacey told neighbors that he had killed his man, and when later told that he had slain Parker, broke down and wept.

"I wouldn't care what they would do to me if I had killed the right man," he told friends who visited him at the jail here.

PUT OFF INTERURBAN CAR.

The Ejected Passenger Hurls Stone Through Car Window.

Garrett, Ind., Nov. 18.—John Newhower, a machinist employed in the B. & O. shops here, was arrested Sunday afternoon by Marshal Schudel, of this city, charged with having thrown a stone through the car window of one of the passenger cars of the Toledo and Chicago interurban railroad company. The offense was committed Sunday afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock, the interurban car being on its way from Garrett to Auburn and crowded with passengers.

Newbower had been to Fort Wayne and was returning to his home here at Garrett. He had paid his fare to Garrett, but when the car arrived here he was asleep and failed to get off. After the car had left Garrett the conductor, Elmer Sheets, in his collecting of fares, came to Newbower and, remembering that the latter had only paid his fare to Garrett, demanded additional fare. This Newbower refused to pay. An altercation followed and Conductor Sheets stopped the car in the suburbs of Garrett and ejected Newbower.

Before the car could start up, Newbower picked up a big stone and hurled it through the front vestibule window, hitting Motorman Russ and slightly injuring him. Following this the fellow said he could lick the whole crew of the car. Motorman Russ got off and give him a chance. A lively scene ensued and Newbower soon had the worst of it. He was held in charge until Marshal Schudel could be telephoned for. On his arrival the fellow was put under arrest and placed in the lock-up at Garrett.

ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL.

Motion Made in Auburn Court in Sheffer-Fitzpatrick Case.

Auburn, Ind., Nov. 18.—In the circuit court here Dan M. Link, one of the attorneys of the defendant in the case of John Sheffer vs. Bernard Fitzpatrick, has filed a motion for a new trial. It will be remembered that the case was one in which Mr. Fitzpatrick, of Fort Wayne, was sued for $2,500 by Mr. Sheffer, it being alleged that Mr. Sheffer's horse had been frightened by Mr. Fitzpatrick's automobile and had run away and injured plaintiff. In the trial by a jury last week Sheffer secured a judgment of $600.

The motion filed by Mr. Fitzpatrick's attorney sets forth eighty reasons why a new trial should be granted. It states that the verdict was contrary to the evidence and that some of the material instructions to the jury asked for by the defendant were refused by the presiding judge. The motion for the new trial will not come up for hearing until the December term of court.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO URGE ACTION BY CONGRESS

Splendid Public Interest in Proposed River Improvement.

As the initial step in an organized and systematic effort to secure the improvement of the Maumee river so that the stream may be navigable between Fort Wayne and Toledo, a special committee of Fort Wayne citizens, to be named within a few days, will direct the work of bringing the matter before congress, asking for a governmental survey of the stream and a report on its possibilities in order to determine the feasibility of the project.

This is one of the results of a splendid public meeting held Saturday evening in the assembly room of the court house. Nearly five hundred persons were present, and the assemblage disclosed abundant popular interest in the plan to give Fort Wayne and other cities along the Maumee a deep waterway route to supplement other transportation facilities.

Toledo to Chicago Finally.

It was soon evident in the addresses that there was a pronounced conviction that the improvement, when it shall come, will not be merely a Toledo-Fort Wayne waterway, but that it will continue westward across Indiana to Lake Michigan, giving the latter a cross-country water connection with Lake Erie and lopping off some hundreds of miles of water travel now necessary in moving freight from the Chicago district to Lake Erie.

P. A. Randall was chosen chairman of the evening, and there were addresses by Judge Robert S. Taylor, Frank B. Taylor, William T. Harris, of Chicago, Congressman Gilhams, Senator S. B. Fleming, C. S. Bash and T. J. Logan, all of whom spoke in support of the movement. Mr. Randall declared his belief that the people of Fort Wayne ought to resolve themselves into a committee of thinkers to develop the project, and referred to some of the advantages that must accrue from it, and he presented Judge Robert S. Taylor as the first speaker of the evening.

Great Movement is Beginning.

Judge Taylor explained at the outset of his remarks that he had not given the Toledo-Fort Wayne waterway project any specific attention, and he purposed to speak merely upon the general elements of the problem. He declared that there is undoubtedly today a great movement in the United States toward the construction of inland waterways. It is the logical result of the development of the country. We have long had a habit of failing to appreciate the future. Everything we do turns out very soon to be too small. In no field is this more evident than in the matter of transportation facilities. The phenomenal growth of the past ten or twenty years is not a measure, but merely a promise of what is to come. James J. Hill, who is a recognized authority in railroad matters, declares the United States must have greater transportation facilities. This movement, then, for inland waterways, rests upon good ground. The coming generation is certain to see the construction of a vast system of inland waterways, and we ought to take encouragement from this fact. The practical question for us today is to understand it, to grasp the significance of the movement and to take advantage of such possibilities as it may contain.

Will Move Very Slowly.

"It is not a thing to get excited about nor indulge in extravagant expectations over," continued Judge Taylor. "The work done by congress will be on a vast scale, and we may be certain there will be no appropriation for construction by congress until the whole system is planned out. It is certain, too, that work will begin on the larger enterprises first; the smaller ones must come later. Undoubtedly the most important is the deep waterway from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, on which much work has already been done. But I believe it is entirely practicable to procure legislation by which the engineering departments of the government shall make surveys of all work that has the promise of national utility. The present duty is to get incorporated into the congressional bill provisions for the survey of the Maumee. What can be done between Fort Wayne and Toledo involves facts with which I am not familiar. This can be determined only by surveys, examinations and reports. We may depend upon it congress will not make any appropriation for little canals.

"What I should like to see is a waterway large enough for barges that can be towed across the great lakes. If that can be done, this is a practical scheme. Barges with a draught of thirteen to fourteen feet transporting coal direct to our city would mean an enormous saving in fuel expenses, and it is a matter of paramount consideration. Whether the Maumee will permit this sort of improvement or not is a problem that involves many questions—the fall, capacity of channel, locks, dams, water supply and other details, and that's the sort of thing that can only be demonstrated by surveys. The great fact is that the country is entering upon a great scheme of inland waterways, and if the Maumee can be made a part of this vast system, Fort Wayne ought to be up and doing, so that our river may not be overlooked. All we can do at present is to call congressional attention to it and if possible get a provision for examination into the general scheme. A waterway from Toledo to Chicago would mean a great interstate water highway. I believe the time will come when a direct waterway will connect Lake Erie and Lake Michigan. When it does, will it cross northern Indiana or southern Michigan?"

Had Made Some Calculations.

With the aid of some contour maps of the government geological survey, Frank B. Taylor made some interesting calculations regarding the possibility of the Lake Erie and Lake Michigan waterway in which he demonstrated that the Fort Wayne route, utilizing the Maumee river, was infinitely superior to the more northerly route for such a canal. Mr. Taylor explained that Fort Wayne is about 180 feet above the level of Lake Erie, which would signify that boats would have to be locked up to about that degree in making the trip, whereas in crossing Michigan the canal would have to overcome an elevation of more than 300 feet above Lake Erie. The Fort Wayne route, he explained, indicated much the easiest grade from lake to lake, and he had drawn a line across northern Indiana, following the line of least resistance. This traced the canal to Fort Wayne by way of the Maumee, thence to Huntington, Laketon, Rochester, Lake Maxinkuckee, Walkerton and Michigan City.

On the Work Years Ago.

Another speaker whose talk was deeply interesting was W. T. Harris, of Chicago. Twelve years ago Mr. Harris, then a resident of Defiance, was engaged under the auspices of trades organizations of Toledo, Defiance, Dayton and other Ohio cities, in promoting a plan for a deep waterway connecting Lake Erie and Lake Michigan, and while the effort came to naught, Mr. Harris has never for a moment lost faith in it. He declared himself deeply gratified at Fort Wayne's manifestation of interest in the deep waterway measure at this time. He declared that the old Wabash and Erie canal should have been preserved, and while encouraging Fort Wayne's movement for the waterway to Toledo, he spoke for the larger scheme of a Lake Erie-Lake Michigan waterway. Between Fort Wayne and Toledo, he explained, two routes were offered that were absolutely feasible—the Maumee river and the Miami and Erie canal—the latter presenting sixty miles of completed waterway between Toledo and Defiance. His suggested line for the Lake Michigan canal after leaving Fort Wayne sent the waterway by way of Syracuse, Goshen, Elkhart and South Bend, and he declared that personal investigation had convinced him this route was more feasible than the one indicated on Mr. Taylor's map. He referred to the immense possibilities and advantages of a canal across Indiana and declared his firm belief that Fort Wayne would one day see the work completed. He warmly supported Judge Taylor's suggestion of an appeal to congress at once for governmental surveys, and declared it Fort Wayne's plain duty to take the lead in this matter.

Gilhams Pledges His Aid.

Congressman Gilhams spoke briefly, but declared himself warmly in accord with the effort, and pledged his aid to the fullest extent possible. Mr. Gilhams stated, however, that in all probability he would call upon some of the Fort Wayne citizens to aid him in his effort to impress congress with the importance of this project. He cited some of the difficulties likely to be encountered in the fact that while at the last session of congress the rivers and harbor committee had before it improvements costing $450,000,000 only $83,000,000 of the work was given favorable recommendation.

Touched Practical Side.

In a few brief remarks which were directly to the point Charles S. Bash dwelt upon the economic and practical side of the suggested river improvement, which he declared touched the pocketbook of every farmer, manufacturer, business man, professional man and laboring man in this entire region. The saving that would result in the transportation of products, agricultural and manufactured, as well as fuel, could not be measured by any expenditure that the government might be called upon to make in creating a deep waterway out of the Maumee river. He raised a laugh in relating a recent dream in which he saw immense coal barges tied up to Fort Wayne docks at a very low rate for transportation, but he declared the dream could be realized. He charged that some of the newspapers were lax in not giving sufficient attention to the project and said also that many people failed to appreciate its importance. Mr. Bash not only asserted his belief in the entire practicability of the movement, but declared that there would be no cessation of effort until the deep waterway is a reality.

Says Great Canal Must Come.

Senator S. B. Fleming cited present operations at Gary as an instance of what can be accomplished when determined men set out upon a great enterprise, and he declared the Chicago-Lake Erie canal must eventually come. Canada's Georgian Bay canal, said Senator Fleming, will divert much of Chicago's northwest trade, and only a direct canal route eastward can save Chicago's business interests. Mr. Fleming believed that if the survey can be secured the rest will be easy, for Chicago will see its opportunities and aid the movement.

His remarks moved Mr. Harris to again ask for the floor to say that Mr. Fleming had hit the nail squarely on the head, and that he had refrained from referring to the Georgian Bay canal from the fact that he believed it Chicago's duty to take up the matter first.

Attorney T. J. Logan, who has taken great interest in the Maumee project from the first, presented a resolution for an organization to take up the effort systematically and lay it before congress in the effort to secure an appropriation for a survey of the Maumee. Mr. Logan's motion was adopted with enthusiasm, and Chairman Randall was instructed to name a special committee of which he shall be chairman.

CLEARED AWAY.

Proper Food Put the Troubles Away.

Our own troubles always seem more severe than any others. But when a man is unable to eat even a light breakfast, for years, without severe distress, he has trouble enough.

It is small wonder he likes to tell of food which cleared away the troubles.

"I am glad of the opportunity to tell of the good Grape-Nuts has done for me," said a N. H. man. "For many years I was unable to eat even a light breakfast without great suffering.

"After eating I would suddenly be seized with a terrible attack of colic and vomiting. This would be followed by headache and misery that would sometimes last a week or two, leaving me so weak I could hardly sit up or walk.

"Since I began to eat Grape-Nuts I have been free from the old troubles. I usually eat Grape-Nuts one or more times a day, taking it at the beginning of the meal. Now I can eat almost anything I want without trouble.

"When I began to use Grape-Nuts I was way under my usual weight, now I weigh 30 pounds more than I ever weighed in my life, and I am glad to speak of the food that has worked the change."

The Old and New Way

Some Important Facts Which May Prove Helpful.

Thirty years ago old-fashioned cod liver oil had to be forced down a patient's throat. Invalids couldn't take it, and children wouldn't. But the doctors prescribed it, and it had to be taken by force. Yet it cured people where enough could be taken into the system, for it has ever been the greatest of all tissue builders and general reconstructors known to medicine.

Vinol is a new form of this very old and valuable remedy, containing in a concentrated form all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but by an extractive and concentrating process it is made without oil or grease, and it is as delicious to the taste as a fresh orange.

Vinol does not upset the stomach like old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions; its strengthening and healing properties are remarkable, and both doctors and patients are delighted with its action.

Many wonderful cures right here in Fort Wayne have been effected by its use. Money will be returned to all customers who try Vinol every time it fails to make rich, red blood, increase the appetite, cure stomach troubles, give strength and renewed vitality to the aged, run-down, tired and debilitated, or cure chronic colds, hacking coughs or bronchitis. GOVERNMENT WILL AID.

The decision of President Roosevelt and Secretary of Treasury Cortelyou to come to the aid of the financial situation in a large way will have extensive material and moral effect on disturbing conditions. While the sale of $50,000,000 Panama canal bonds will serve to draw a vast amount of timid money from its recesses, the issuance of treasury certificates up to $100,000,000 if needed will augment the curgency. Better than all, however, must as must immediately relieve the stringency. Better, than all, however, must be the effect of this in restoring confidence and persuading the timid to put their money back where it may course in the legitimate channels of circulation where it is so badly needed.

For the most part financiers approve of the treasury plans for relief, and only a weak dissonant note is sounded as to the proposition for issuing so vast a sum as $100,000,000 in treasury certificates. The majority of authorities, however, approve even this, and believe it will do immense good.

Secretary Cortelyou's counsel to the people, in course of a speech the other day, to put their money where it will do good, embraces the one great measure that will restore all conditions of business—financial, industrial and commercial—to normal aspects. Already industry is seriously feeling the situation and it is hoped that the relief measures decided upon will start things back to the high level from which the country fell a month ago.

Bids for the first two dirigible balloons of the war department's Atlantic fleet will be opened next month. Brigadier General James Allen, chief of the Signal Corps, has decided to use funds from the signal corps' annual appropriation while waiting for congress to provide the $200,000 promised by Secretary Taft. Rapid strides in aeronautics, the success of the St. Louis balloon carnival and the full realization of the importance of dirigibles for military purposes have influenced the signal corps to believe that time is now an important factor and that dirigibles must be had by the army for training men for the aerial fleet. The dirigibles for which bids are to be opened will be of the latest model, although they will be much smaller than the balloons the signal corps will construct when the money is available.

Secretary Taft is coming straight through from Vladivostok to the little old United States, without wobbling into byways or stopping anywhere to see anybody. He has determined to pass up even his good friend the Kaiser, whom he arranged to meet in England. All which goes to indicate that Secretary Taft expects to find some very busy business upon his arrival in the United States.

The question of the democratic presidential nominee being settled, it would save a lot of money and work and spare the country a heap of turmoil if T. R. would imitate the Platte statesman and say that he can be had if wanted.

KISSES GIRL; BREAKS CLAVICLE.

Young Connecticut Swain Injured When Father Interrupts Osculation.

Wlusted, Conn., Nov. 18.—From Killingworth comes the story of how James Brokett, while kissing his sweetheart, Miss Hattie Leonard, good night, Friday, fractured his collar bone. He blames his prospective father-in-law for his misfortune, because, he says, Samuel Leonard shouted from his bedroom: "There is another night coming; why don't you let Hattie go to bed. She's got to make butter tomorrow." Brockett started to leave, and on the landing embraced the girl. He slipped on the frost covered porch and both went tumbling to the bottom. The father then had to get out of bed, hitch up a team and take the young man to a doctor.

ROUMANIAN BOY SWEARS HE WAS MISTAKEN IN AGE

Saloonkeeper Escapes Fine by New Method—City Court Cases.

A Roumanian lad who was nineteen years old a few weeks ago was twenty-one in the city court this morning when the case against Nick Delason was called for permitting minors to loiter in his saloon and there was nothing left for Judge Skelton to do but enter an order of acquittal.

There was a riot in the saloon some time ago in which a man was shot in the leg and the chief witness, whose name is also Delason and who says he is a nephew of the proprietor of the place, made an affidavit that he was a minor and an affidavit was filed. This morning he found that after several days of investigation he was twenty-one years and two months old, so an interpreter testified.

Vriesno Went Over.

William Vriesno, convicted several months ago of stealing brass from the Centlivre brewery and who was let off under a suspended sentence at that time because he wept bitterly and told that he had been ill and that he was on the eve of sending to Germany for his sweetheart to be married to her, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $10 and costs when he was arraigned on the charge of stealing brass from the Pennsylvania company.

He was engaged yesterday afternoon in dismantling a locomotive near Gay street when Railroad Patrolman Fisher caught him. He put up a fight got away and ran followed by several shots and was finally subdued after a tustle. He stated that he had not intended to steal the brass, but he was engaged in taking out a number of bolts when the officer discovered him.

One Year in Huntington.

George Long, an old harnessmaker who has been up for drunkenness several times, got the worst jolt of his city court experience this morning when he was sentenced to serve a year in Huntington. He had been over there, he said, five months and in that time had not taken a drink, but when he came back here he blew the foam off too many schooners of suds and it put him to the bad. Judge Skelton told him if he thought he could go back to Huntington and stay there a year he would let him off. He promised.

The Other Cases.

A man giving the name of C. W. Williams and Albert Eckert were up on the charge of assault and battery for engaging in a fight on South Calhoun street Saturday night. Part of the evidence was heard and the matter went over until tomorrow morning.

Frank Fanning got $5 and costs for vagrancy and Fred Nelson was placed in the hands of the chief of police, who will get him a job.

Lyman Franklin was arrested for drunkenness at the Pennsylvania depot and was given an hour to get out of the city.

Louis Brunner, employed at the Central foundry, was up on the complaint of his wife and drew a fine, but it was suspended under promise that he would quit drinking and abusing his family.

THE VALUE GIVERS

ingtonians, Washington newspaper men and policemen who saw Mrs. Bradley after the tragedy and who will be questioned concerning her demeanor and appearance at the time, with the hope of creating the impression that she was not responsible for her act.

Reporter a Witness.

James Hay, a reporter who interviewed Mrs. Bradley at the first police station on the night of the tragedy, was the first witness of the day. The defendant, he said, then appeared pale, haggard and very much agitated. She was constantly moving about the room at the station, wrung her hands and remarked that she felt that she was far away from everything.

He had cautioned her that anything she said would be printed. She did not talk connectedly and he had to question her repeatedly. She told him that she had two children and that Senator Brown was their father. She denied that she came to this city to kill Brown. She declared she was a disgraced woman, ruined and an outcast and therefore did not expect to have any friends or help. Once during the interview she turned to the police matron, called attention to some noise in another part of the station and told the matron she would go mad if the noise did not stop.

"Did you form any opinion as to her mental condition?" asked the judge.

"Yes; I had my suspicions, but could not say whether she was sane or insane."

Writer Tells of Interview.

Charles A. Cotterill, of the Associated Press, who interviewed Mrs. Bradley immediately after the tragedy, testified that the prisoner seemed unable to collect her thoughts. She told him she arrived here from Salt Lake practically penniless. She did not volunteer anything, merely answering questions. Asked by the defense if there was anything peculiar about her eyes, witness stated that he observed a vacant stare. Mr. Cotterill testified he asked Mrs. Bradley if she had not just before the tragedy asked Mr. Brown to marry her.

She replied that she had, but that Brown's only answer was to put on his overcoat and start to go out of the room.

Mrs. Bradley told the witness that she abhorred an act of this kind, meaning the shooting, but that she believed that in this case it was necessary. Witness testified that he did not think Mrs. Bradley was insane.

Sergeant Harry Lohmann in charge of the police station when Mrs. Bradley was brought there after her arrest, testified that she talked in a rambling manner. She was very anxious to know Senator Brown's condition. Witness stated Mrs. Bradley told him she did not intend to shoot Brown, that she loved the ground he walked on. She discussed her relations with Brown, said she was not married to him, but that he was the father of her two children and that she wanted him to make her his wife.

He thought the prisoner was sane.

Policeman Emmert, who accompanied Mrs. Bradley from the hotel to the police station, said that at the police station she seemed to be wilder, and had a stare look, but afterward appeared rational. He expressed the opinion that Mrs. Bradley was sane.

Her Physician Testifies.

Dr. E. Whitney, of Salt Lake City, testified that he attended Mrs. Bradley when her two children were born and later treated her for a premature birth, his treatment on this latter occasion continuing for about two weeks. He thought this was in November, 1901. In August, 1904, witness said, she again came to him for treatment.

On the date mentioned he sent her to a hospital. A premature birth, he said, occurred four days after her entry at the hospital, at which she was kept until early in September. On May 16, 1905, at her residence in Salt Lake, Dr. Whitney stated he again treated her for a similar trouble.

The defense brought from the witness that the blood poisoning that set in a case like that of Mrs. Bradley's, affects the whole system, including the brain, and like all poisoning, must leave some permanent injury to the system.

Louis A. McMahon, a newspaper reporter, told of Mrs. Bradley's bewildered and distracted appearance at the police station. She denied to him, he said, that she came to Washington with the intention of shooting Brown. His opinion was that her mind was very much disturbed and any additional shock might make her insane.

Recess at this point was taken.

FEDERAL COURT LATER.

December Term in Fort Wayne Will Be Deferred to January.

There will be no term of the United States court in Fort Wayne in December, but in compliance with requests of attorneys who have important cases under way, Judge Anderson has indicated his willingness to fix a later date, probably in January, for the Fort Wayne term. PERFECT PRUNES PROVE WORMY AND A SUIT IS FILED

Cleveland Broker Made Defendant in Damage Suit —The Courts.

A carload of wormy prunes labeled "perfect," formed the basis of a law suit filed in the superior court today and an attachment that followed against Herbert N. Gage, of Cleveland, a broker who engaged to deliver 1,200 boxes of the Santa Clara variety in first class condition.

A. H. Perfect & Co. are the complainants in the case and they allege that in June of this year they made a contract with Gage for a first class consignment of prunes. When the car came it was full of prunes and the prunes, according to the allegation of the complaint, were full of worms. The boxes on top, it is alleged, were all right, but the ones underneath were bad prunes. The suit is brought for $3,000 damages for the failure of the broker to perform his contract. Harper & Eggeman filed the action.

Bisson Case On Trial.

The suit against Dr. Morse Harrod, instituted by Mary Bisson on the allegation that he was guilty of malpractice in the treatment of an injury to one of her wrists, was placed on trial before a circuit court jury this morning. On the first trial she secured a judgment for $2,000 and Judge O'Rourke granted a new hearing.

Got a Divorce.

On the ground of abandonment, failure to provide and drunkenness, Lottie Tagtmeyer secured a divorce from William Tagtmeyer in the superior court today. She also got the custody of a daughter ten years old. The other children of the family have passed their majority.

RETURN OLD BATTLEFLAGS.

Veterans of Mexican War Turn Over Tattered War Standards.

New York, Nov. 18.—Five grizzled veterans, all that remain of the famous "Fighting First," of the Mexican war, relinquished their battle torn flags Sunday on Governor's island in the presence of a distinguished assemblage. The veterans were First Sergeant Jacob Rich Riley, Sergeant Charles H. Farrell, Private John Dick, Private James Butterfield and Musician John Peter Eckweller. Sergeant Riley carried the "Fighting First's" national colors, Dick the battle flag and Butterfield and Eckweller the regimental guidons. Heretofore the colors have been in the keeping of the city of New York in the relic room at the city hall.

The flags were placed in sconces in the post chapel of St. Cornelius the Centurion, and will hereafter be cared for by the United States government.

The flags were carried by the first regiment, New York volunteer infantry in the Mexican war, from the siege of Vera Cruz, after the capture of the city of Mexico. When mustered in on Dec. 1846, the regiment numbered 966 officers and men. Less than 300 returned from Mexico. But four regiments in General Scott's army equalled or slightly exceeded the losses of this gallant regiment in killed and wounded.

GROOM COWS IN PURE MILK WAR

Dairymen of Montclair, N. J., Resort to Extremes of Cleanliness.

Montclair, N. J., Nov. 18.—Recent health board agitation has prompted some of the dairymen in Montclair to go to great lengths to impress customers with the purity of their product.

Every cow in one herd is declared to be washed and groomed and rubbed off with a clothes brush just before milking. Then a man comes along with pails of water and cloths and washes the udder of each cow carefully. This operation is repeated by two other men, a third carefully drying the cows. These men are in charge of a bacteriologist.

Men who milk the cows are clad in snow white uniforms and before performing their tasks must have their nails manicured. They also must pass inspection of the bacteriologist before they are permitted to milk cows.

TAFT WILL COME ON HOME WITHOUT A STOP

Cancels His Engagement to Meet Kaiser in Egland—Business Presses Him.

Hamburg, Nov. 18.—Secretary Taft has engaged passage for New York on the Hamburg American line steamer President Grant, sailing from here Saturday, December 7th.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS ON.

Paris, Nov. 18.—The dispatch received at the American embassy here from Secretary Taft, who is now at Vladivostok, announcing his inability to visit Paris or Berlin on his way home from the far east, says that "Important business at home" makes it impossible for him to visit either of those capitals.

The secretary will leave St. Petersburg Dec. 5th, direct for Hamburg, and will sail for New York from that port December 7th.

ORDERS PASSAGE ENGAGED.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Secretary Taft, who arrived at Vladivostok yesterday, has cabled Major McIntyre, the acting chief of the insular bureau, to engage accommodations for him and his party on the steamship President Grant, which leaves Hamburg, Germany, on Dec. 7th for New York. The secretary said nothing about his program for the stay in Asia or Europe. Mr. Taft telegraphed that all the party were well. It is understood here that Mrs. Taft will not come to the United States with the secretary, but that she will remain in Europe for a short time.

WAS PAINFULLY INJURED.

Mrs. C. E. Tomlinson Hurt in Fall Down Cellar Stairway.

While assisting in preparations for a surprise party at the home of H. J. Malcolm, 1331 East Pontiac street, a few days ago, Mrs. C. E. Tomlinson, who resides on the Bluffton road, was seriously injured by falling down an inside open cellarway. Mrs. Tomlinson stepped into a dark pantry and fell headforemost down the cellar stairs, striking upon her head on the rough stone below. The fall might have proved fatal but for the fact that Mrs. Tomlinson happened to be wearing her hair done up on top of her head, and in this way the full force of the blow upon the head was lessened. She sustained a severe bruise upon the head and a painfully sprained knee, but was able to be removed to her home Saturday. Her husband is an employe of the Allen county infirmary.

Taken by rail from Ballarat north to Melbourne, a collie appeared three weeks later at its old home, having found its way over 104 miles of road, which it had never traversed before.

Dainty Hardanger Embroidery

HARDANGER WORK SAMPLER

The illustration shows a table centre or lamp mat worked in the beautiful and popular Hardanger embroidery. The design is a particularly pretty one, and the fact that it comes direct from Norway, the home of this lace-like work, adds much to its attraction.

This table centre was worked in cream color on fine congress canvas but any shades the worker's fancies may be suitably employed.

For this work a pair of very sharp embroidery scissors is necessary for cutting the canvas, and the best needle is a blunt pointed canvas one of rather small size.

The sampler showing the various stitches on a greatly enlarged scale together with the following description of each of them, should enable any one to accomplish a similar piece of work without any difficulty.

Figure No. 1 shows how the satin stich which is used for outlining diamonds, etc., is worked; it is done over four threads, and five stitches form a group; these groups are worked first along and then down so as to form a zigzag slanting line. This stitch should be worked from right to left.

Figure No. 2.—Method of cutting and drawing the threads, and working the simple weave or darning stitch.

The needle is passed over two threads and then under the same, and it is brought up in the middle ready to begin the same stitch over the two threads of canvas on the opposite side.

Figure No. 3 illustrates method of working the little ornamental picots; the bar is worked half-way with ordinary weave stitch, then the needle is passed under the working thread and the last darning stitch and taken through the loop thus formed; when pulled up fairly tight a neat "picot" is the result.

Figure No. 4—The lace filling or "point d'esprit" stitch is worked in this manner:—Three sides of the square are completed in weave stitch, and when half way through with the fourth side the needle is passed through the middle of each of the finished bars in turn, and then under the last working thread of the fourth side, which is then completed like the others in weave-stitch, says Home Notes.

The edging of the work is done in ordinary buttonhole stitch familiar to every one, while the little border which makes such a pretty finish to the centre is merely satin stitch in groups of five, worked over four, six and eight threads respectively.

MACMILLEN AND HIS VIOLIN.

How He Has Been Received in Other Cities.

A writer in the Boston Journal said of Francis Macmillen, who will be heard in this city on Wednesday evening in the Majestic theater, that the young violinist shows promise of developing into the greatest of our native violinists. Mr. Macmillen is assisted by Mrs. Rosina Van Dyk, a soprano from the opera house at Amsterdam, and Richard Hageman, pianist, who will accompany both performers. The same critic continues thus:

"Mr. Macmillen is a splendid artist. He was magnificent last year; he is still more magnificent this year. In other words he has been growing, artistically, since he was here before. His art is maturing. Already his technique is marvelous and he has an abundance of the spirit that produces 'tone.' His tone is remarkably large and pure. Indeed it is only in sense of rhythm, to judge by last night's performance, that Macmillen fails to reach up to the full measure of the mature artist. His rhythm is spasmodic, but that may have been due to nervousness, for it must be remembered that this admirable American violinist has barely reached manhood. His professional career has just begun. But he is well equipped for it.

"His performance of Bach's exacting Concerto in E major, the first number on the over-long program, was as smooth and brilliant as a diamond. Again he proved his possession of the true artistic spirit in his playing of Beethoven's Romance in F major. His extraordinary technique was amply displayed in the Concerto in D minor by Vieuxtemps, in Randegger's 'Bohemian Dance,' and in the Paganini piece for G string alone. Then, to prove his broad virtuosity, he extracted the sweet charm and daintiest grace from the Mozart minuet and from the barcarole by Debussy. This latter number was the novelty on the program."

Confidence

IS THE CORNER-STONE OF THE ENTIRE COMMERCIAL EDIFICE.

Particularly in the piano business is confidence an essential to successful business. Ninety-nine persons out of a hundred do not posses sufficient knowledge to appraise correctly the comparative value of different pianos.

Therefore, when purchasing a piano the great majority of people are compelled TO TRUST SOMEBODY. The conspicuous success of the PACKARD MUSIC HOUSE in selling pianos has been attained by the CONFIDENCE inspired in the music-loving public. . .

THIS IS DUE NOT ONLY TO THE HIGH CHARACTER OF THE INSTRUMENTS PRODUCED BY THE PACKARD COMPANY, BUT ALSO BY THE SOUND PRINCIPLES UNDER WHICH THESE INSTRUMENTS ARE SOLD. OUR PLATFORM from the beginning has been equal treatment to all.

There are no concessions obtainable by one purchaser that are not open to all. Every price tag on a Piano or a Pianola Piano at the PACKARD MUSIC HOUSE MEANS EXACTLY WHAT IT SAYS.

In stores which have a secret, sliding scale of prices you can never be sure of anything. It is not a sound business principle to price a Piano so high that there is room for an elastic system of special discounts and rebates. If you are offered a secret discount, how can you know that some more favored purchaser is not receiving a much larger discount?

IMPORTANT—Just received entire stock of Holiday Pianos, including the finest styles of Weber and Steck Pianola Pianos. Instruments may be selected now for Christmas delivery.

HAUSENPFEFFER

This is the favorite German way of cooking hare or rabbit. After a careful cleaning, being particular not to break the gall bladder in the liver, cut into pieces, making four pieces of the backbone from thighs to shoulders. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan and when hot add two tablespoonfuls of chopped bacon, two small carrots scraped and chopped fine, a bay leaf, a couple of cloves, a clove of garlic with salt and pepper to season. If liked, a few button mushrooms may also be added. Put in the hare and when nicely browned stir in one-half cup of vinegar and water. Cover closely and simmer gently until the meat is tender, adding at the last a cupful of cream. Serve with noodles.

HENDRICKS WILL BRING SPRINGFIELD TEAM INTACT

Denies the Grand Rapids Story and Says He Has Old Club.

In a letter to The Sentinel, Jack Hendricks, manager of the Fort Wayne baseball team, takes occasion to deny the story sent out from Springfield that he will go to Grand Rapids and take Clark and Dickey, two of the stars of his team, with him.

"I will say that there is not a word of truth in it and I will manage Fort Wayne and Clark and Dickey will be with me along with the rest of the team that won the championship."

As a matter of fact little faith has been put in the story because it is not likely that the Central League would attempt such a trick on Fort Wayne as the club and league management both want to put their best foot forward as this city will do its portion toward supporting the organization. Dr. Carson has denied the story. Hendricks has denied it over his own signature and there appears to have been no foundation for it other than the spleen that prompted the sporting writers of a town that would not pay money to see a championship club.

At the October meeting of the league at Toledo Hendricks stated that he played to one enormous crowd of sixty people when his club was in first place and was forced to pay the visiting team $40 for the pleasure of serving out top notch base ball to an unappreciative audience.

Hendricks is already laying his plans for spring practice and will book some of the big league teams for exhibition games before the opening of the regular season. He has already booked the Boston Americans for games on April 7 and 8. Mr. Hendricks writes that while he has lost some players that will be hard to replace he has both of his catchers and all his pitchers which is half the battle.

Led the American League

"TY" COBB, OF DETROIT.

Tyrus Cobb, the sensational Detroit outfielder, who fell down so woefully in the world's championship series, showed wonderful improvement over the form he displayed in 1906 and led the American League in batting this season, twenty-nine points ahead of Kay, of Washington, who was next to him. He batted thirty-two points over his record of 1906.

Sam Crawford is really entitled to second place because he played in 144 games and got .320 as against .295 a year ago. Stone, of St. Louis, one of the leaders last season, fell away from .358 to .320, and there are only nine men as good as .300. Last season there were thirteen.

The mighty Napoleon Lajoie went down the line in a most discouraging way, falling from third place with .355 to tenth with .299. The most wonderful decline, however, is in the form displayed by Catcher Clarke, of the Naps, who tied Stone for first last season with .358 and finished way down the line in 1907 with a percentage of .269. George Nill, who started the season with Washington and finished with Cleveland, batted .229 in seventy-eight games. The Detroit champions had three men above the .300 mark, while Philadelphia, the contender until the last three games of the season, had only one in the person of Nicholls. The following is a list of those who batted .275 or better:

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 18.—"Germany" Schulz, Michigan's giant center, now doped as the greatest of all players in that position, will be eligible for next year's team, according to Coach Yost, who says that he never saw any finer work displayed than the German put up Saturday. With Schulz there will be Quarter Back Wasmund, Tackle Casey, Half Back Allerdice, Full Back Watkins, Half Back Lehr and Featherstone, end. Besides these there are such good scrubs as Flannigan, Riley, Benbrook and Robice, who made the smashing sixty-yard run for a touchdown against the varsity last Tuesday, for a foundation for the 1908 team.

Michigan came out of Saturday's game battered, bewildered and bemoaning, but there were no serious results outside the score. The struggle was so desperate and so strenuous that slight hurts could not be avoided. In a tackle Casey went to the ground just before the game closed and he was so badly cut above the eye that three stitches had to be taken in the lid. In an end run Hammond tried hard to get by an opposing player, and one of his eyes was closed up. And then Allerdice stumbled once and fell, hurting his leg. He is lame, but there is nothing alarming about his condition.

Nothing was said about a return game for next year with the Quakers, and nothing will be done about it until after Thanksgiving. The Michigan followers are sore and vexed over the referee's decision disallowing Magoffin's touchdown, and claim that Michigan was not given a fair shake by eastern officials when playing an eastern eleven. At the same time it is acknowledged that Pennsylvania had the better offense with their superb backfield, but that Michigan had the superior line.

"That play on which Magoffin clearly made a touchdown I have had for two years in development in order to perfect," said Coach Yost. From the formation on it there can be worked sixteen different plays, and only three were opened Saturday. Nobody outside of the players had seen it until Saturday. That it was a winner is shown and we were not allowed it."

The decisive tally came about the middle of the first half, when Keinath drove a pop-up kick from the Wolverine twenty-five yard line to Magoffin on the fifteen yard line. The leader of the maize and blue eleven did not get a good hold on the leather and the ball bounced around on the heads and upraised hands of the players who bunched around him. When it dropped, Gallagher, Pennsylvania's left guard, was under it. He turned and covered the intervening distance of ten yards in a trice. Scarlett kicked the goal and Michigan was beaten.

Old Fashioned Football Played.

Throughout the remainder of the first half Michigan put up a creditable game, keeping Penn working hard all the time. Yet the football played by both was distinctly old fashioned, except for flashes of new trickiness by the Wolverines. In the second half the Quakers kept the play wholly within Michigan's territory, except for a short time. In this period the easterners reverted to still more ancient ball, depending on tackle and guard smashes.

Each side crossed the other's goal line unavailingly in the second half. From the fifteen yard line Keinath passed forward to Greene illegally, and, though the Quakers got across the line all right, the ball had to come out. For a few moments following this Michigan, by good forward passing, showed up the red and blue. Two passes and the ball was in midfield. Then Wasmund passed a beauty thirty yards forward to Magoffin, and the Wolverine leader sprinted across the visitors' goal line.

The crowd of 18,000 spectators went crazy with joy, only to be plunged into even deeper despair a moment later when the ball was carried back to center field and Michigan penalized fifteen yards. Wasmund had passed directly over center instead of five yards on either side.

McCornack's View of Game.

Neutralizing these plays, as Head Lineman McCornack said after the game the struggle was fairly even, with Penn winning by means that might allow any high school eleven to defeat any university team.

Michigan's offense was largely a failure, especially when it collided with Scarlett, the crack right end of the Penn crowd. Hammond made gains here and there on the old fake kick. Sometimes a neat forward pass was worked to advantage, and now and then Watkins crashed into Dwyer for minor gains. That was all.

Hammond outpunted Hollenbach, thereby gaining a few yards, which were usually lost through the palpable inefficiency of the Wolverine tacklers. On the other hand, Penn's end, Scarlett, and Half Back Greene were strong on tackling the Michigan runners up.

Wolverine Defense Strong.

The quality of the Wolverine defense was tested and found excellent. Penn could not force it for a straightaway touchdown, though at times the Quakers seemed to be marching along triumphantly through Hammond and Graham. Schulz at center, saved the Michiganders' bacon by stopping these plays. Though the score was smaller than the overwhelming rout to which Penn put Michican a year ago on Franklin field, the defeat stung even more. This was Michigan's best team since 1905; probably the best the maize and blue will ever have for years to come. And it could not win.

GOPHERS HARD FOR INDIANS.

Carlisle Defeats Minnesota by a Short Score in Hard Game.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 18.—In one of the most fiercely contested games ever witnessed on Northup field, Carlisle Saturday defeated Minnesota, 12 to 10.

The game was full of spectacular plays. Two long runs by Exendine after forward passes gave Carlisle its two touchdowns. A ninety yard run by Chestnut and a field goal by Capron gave Minnesota its ten points. The showing made by Minnesota in the game was 50 per cent better than the Chicago game. Then men tackled like demons and bucked the line for consistent gains. Had Capron done as well in his drop kicking as in the previous games Minnesota would have at least tied the score. He missed five field goals, two of which were inside the thirty yard line.

The Indians depended upon trick plays and long forward passes to make ground. Mount Pleasant's wonderful long passes of thirty and thirty-five yards were the greatest factors in Carlisle's success. The outcome was better than the most sanguine Minnesota supporters had anticipated. Carlisle, coming fresh from decisive victories over Pennsylvania and Harvard, was booked to give Minnesota a hard beating.

In the second half Minnesota for a time rushed the Indians off their feet.

DARTMOUTH SWAMPS HARVARD.

The Crimson Blanked in a Brilliant Game at Cambridge.

Cambridge Mass., Nov. 18.—About 22,000 people saw the husky Dartmouth team roll up twenty-two points against the Crimson Saturday afternoon and keep Harvard from scoring.

It was a wonderful game to watch from an impartial point of view, a game to be remembered by many sons of old Dartmouth, who crowded the south stands and cheered the team from start to finish, and a pitiful tragedy for Harvard.

Dartmouth was undoubtedly the better team. The players in the green jerseys fought like furies and came back at Harvard twice as hard in the second half as in the first period. Above all, they were a team and their work had been so thoroughly planned and polished off that they worked throughout like a well oiled machine.

NOTRE DAME'S CENTER IS ILL.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 18.—Miller, center on the Notre Dame varsity, is the only regular man not in shape. He is suffering from an abscess on his leg, but it is thought that he will break into the game in a few days. Work will begin at once for the game with Purdue Saturday. Coach Barry has decided, because of the ragged game the varsity played against the alumni last Friday, that the team must be greatly strengthened in order to make a showing against the boilermakers.

ANARCHY IN PLEA FOR GENERAL DISREGARD OF THE LAWS

Rev. Rowand Sharply Takes Issue With the German Alliance.

During the course of his sermon on "The Problem of the City," Sunday morning, Rev. Charles A. Rowand, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, stated that in advocating an open Sunday people were making anarchists of themselves and that the German alliance, in seeking pledges from the candidates who are running for office, not to enforce the laws if elected, were simply asking the men to perjure themselves. Rev. Rowand spoke in part is follows:

"The cities dominate the country. Every city is a Babylon and a New Jerusalem, the one standing for bad and the other for good. The question which confronts us is whether the Babylon will supplant the New Jerusalem or the New Jerusalem the Babylon. The twentieth century city is one of the marvels of the age and its growth has been phenomenal.

"In 1800 4 per cent of the population of our country resided in the cities; in 1900 the percentage had increased to 32½. In fifteen states there are more people in the city than in the country; and in eight states two-thirds of the people live in the city. If the same ratio of increase continues, within twenty-five years a majority of the people will reside in the cities.

"At the base, cities are essentially material and physical, but in American cities the material has outstripped the intellectual and the physical outrun the spiritual, and that means disaster. A healthy proportion must be maintained. Morally, American cities present a sad picture. The congested condition of cities is not conducive to health of body or soul. There are more windowless rooms in New York than in any other city in the world.

"Living as the people do, the hearthstone is lost sight of. Divorces are twice as numerous in the city as in the country. What poverty and congestion do for the poor, wanton living, luxury and frivolity do for rich. It is the middle classes who engage in honest industry with minds upon righteousness which constitute the best interests of our republic.

"Politically, James Bryce, a more capable and friendly critic there is none, says our weak spot of government is our municipality. Our government is founded upon two principles—federation and local self government. Federation was the issue of the civil war and it is well established, but our municipal government is still an experiment.

"We have delegated much of our municipal government to the state and an illustration of this is the fact that Governor Hanly ordered prize fighting to cease in Fort Wayne. This action is simply a confession of the city's inability to govern itself. Such a condition cannot maintain long for a majority of the people will soon live in the cities and can claim their constitutional right of self government.

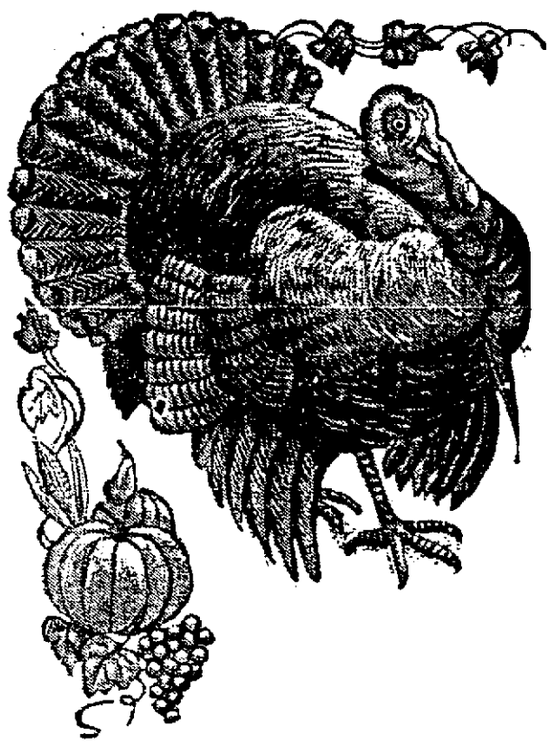
"Politically, our cities are largely in the hands of the criminal classes. In Fort Wayne it seems impossible to secure a conviction of saloon keepers who violate the Sabbath laws. The cities dominate the nation but if left to the cities, what of the future?

"In the face of this the German alliance comes forward and by resolution declares for an open Sunday and the members put on record that they will interview every candidate for office and seek to pledge him that he will not enforce the Sabbath laws. In so doing they seek to pledge the candidate to perjure himself that he will not do his sworn duty. That spirit can be none other than anarchy and if it maintain in America and our cities are not redeemed from boodlers, grafters and people of anarchistic spirit, our nation is doomed.

"History is but a record of the ruins of fallen cities. Corruption and unrighteousness, though robed in royal splendor and buttressed by power, cannot escape the inevitable law."

Mr. Rowand closed with a beautiful plea for civic righteousness and said the church must save the cities.

ROAST YOUR TURKEY IN A BUCK'S RANGE



BUCK'S ventilated oven makes turkeys "juicy" and sweet and your Thanksgiving dinner enjoyable.

The ovens of all Buck's Cook Stoves are ventilated with fresh—heated—air which is drawn into the over through a series of air-ducts, placed near the fire-box. Through perforations in the opposite oven wall, the vapors are drawn up the chimney—thus bringing a constant supply of fresh, hot oxygen into contact with the contents of the oven which prevents "drying out."

Do you have trouble getting the top of your stove to heat quickly? Are you annoyed with having to wait unreasonably for the oven to get hot enough to bake in? Then buy a Buck's range.

Buck's Ranges have "hot-blast" fire boxes, with extra drafts—fire sure to start quickly—more heat produced for less money than in any other range.

Let Us Show You a Buck's Range

A Turkey roasted in a Buck's oven will lose but little weight——and will retain that "rich juicy taste."

The Woeful Reflections of a Withered Dyspeptic.

No substitute for good nature has yet been found. Smiles take root in the stomach. Without good digestion there never can be very much sunshine, for the very simple reason that the stomach and the brain are twins, and what affects one invariably affects the other. The adage that the best road to a person's heart is via the stomach still holds good.

Gorged grub and pappy pie always breed gloom and sleepless nights.

They also breed dyspepsia—quick dyspepsia, and dyspepsia shows itself in a variety of ways—belching, burning sensations, an empty feeling in the stomach, bloating after eating, brash, aversion to food, fermentation, or downright indigestion.

Is This You?

There are few diseases which create such misery—long drawn out misery—as dyspepsia. It pursues you before meals, after meals, and between meals; you take it to bed with you; it is with you at the theater and at your desk.

What is the only way to get rid of it?

You don't have to stop eating, you don't have to diet. Just take something that will do the work of the stomach and let the stomach take a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the most wonderful little tablets on earth for this very thing.

In plain arithmetic, 1 of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets equals 1 good strong stomach for 1 time for 1 good hearty meal. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest perfectly 3,000 grains of food in just the same way that a strong, robust, healthy stomach would do it.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets enrich and increase the gastric juice in your stomach, and that is mostly what you need—more and better gastric juice. And it gives the stomach a rest, a good long rest. In the meantime it cures the dyspepsia, and all other stomach troubles.

Just a few of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will prove to you what these little cherubs of health and happiness can do.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

LUTHER ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

Rev. Dr. Luecke's Sermon Heard by Many at St. Paul's.

At the anniversary services held at St. Paul's Lutheran church Sunday evening in honor of the great reformer, the life of Dr. Martin Luther, its influence upon the history of religion and its lessons to Christians were the subject of Rev. Dr. Luecke's sermon. A large number of people were in attendance, members of the other Lutheran congregations uniting with those of St. Paul's in the service. A musical program, especially prepared, was rendered by the choir, with Prof. H. Feiertag at the organ. Rev. Jacob Miller, of St. Paul's church, gave the scripture reading, while the closing prayer and benediction were given by Rev. William Moll, pastor of Emanuel's Lutheran church.

Rev. Dr. Luecke, who is director of Concordia college, was the speaker for the evening and gave a very interesting discourse on the history of Luther's life, telling of his childhood, his careful bringing up by his pious parents and the early inclinations of his mind to the quest of real truth of religion. He also pictured his life at Erfurt, his resistance of the temptations of life to which too many of the young succumb and his triumph over all obstacles to spiritual and mental development. In this respect, as well as others, he was pictured by the speaker as a "light to the world," and his example was held up more especially to the young, to whom Dr. Luecke directed his remarks with particular force, as worthy of emulation in these days when Godless teachings and practices are prevalent.

MUNCIE BOOMING TRADE.

Business Men to Visit Indiana Interurban Towns.

A two-day trip over interurban lines to the extent of 335 miles which will include the following cities, Hartford City, Bluffton, Fort Wayne, Huntington, Wabash, Peru, Kokomo, Logansport, Delphi, Lafayette, Frankfort and Lebanon, will be made this week by the Commercial club of Muncie for the purpose of booming Muncie trade. The gentlemen will arrive here Wednesday over the Bluffton line, but their stay will be a brief one and their car will be switched to the Southwestern line for the run westward. The trip home will be made by way of Indianapolis and the party will embrace fifty or more men.

THE BOY'S HEAVEN.

You have heard of Martin Luther, a great and good man, who lived in Germany a long time ago. He was very loving to children; and once, when he was away from home, he wrote a letter to his little son. It was dated 1530, so you see it is more than three hundred years old. In those days they had not begun to print any books for children; therefore, I dare say, the boy was doubly delighted to have something in writing, that his friends could read to him. Any boy might be happy to receive such a letter. Listen to it now, and see if you don't think so:

"To my dear little son, Hansigen Luther, grace and peace in Christ:

"My heart-dear little son, I hear that you learn well and pray diligently. Continue to do so, my son. When I come home I will bring you a fine present from the fair. I know of a lovely garden, full of joyful children, who wear little golden crowns and pick up beautiful apples and pears and cherries and plums under the trees. They sing and jump and make merry. They have also beautiful little horses, with golden saddles and silver bridles.

"I asked the man who kept the garden who the children were. And he said to me, 'The children are those who love to learn, and to pray, and to be good.' Then said I, 'Dear sir, I have a little son named Hansigen Luther. May he come into this garden and have the same beautiful apples and pears to eat, the wonderful little horses to ride upon, and may he play about with these children?' Then said he, 'If he is willing to learn, and to pray, and to be good, he shall come into this garden, and Lippus and Justus, too. If they all come together, they shall have pipes and kettledrums, and lutes, and music of stringed instruments. And they shall dance, and shoot with little crossbows.'

"Then he showed me a fine meadow in the garden, all laid out for dancing. There hung golden pipes and kettledrums and fine silver cross-bows. But it was too early to see the dancing, for the children had not had their dinner. I said, 'Ah, dear sir, I will instantly go and write to my little son Hansigen, so that he may study and pray and be good, and thus come into this garden. And he has a little cousin, Lena, whom he must bring with him.' Then he said to me, 'So shall it be. Go home and write to him.'

"Therefore, dear little son Hansigen, be diligent to learn and to pray, and tell Lippus and Justus to do so, too, that you may all meet together in that beautiful garden. Give Cousin Lena a kiss from me. Herewith I recommend you all to the care of Almighty God."

Do you suppose an angel showed him that garden when he was asleep?

BLOOD POISON

HUMILIATING-VILE-DESTRUCTIVE

The first symptom of Contagious Blood Poison is usually a little sore or ulcer, which is quickly followed by a red rash on the skin, swollen glands in the groin, falling hair, ulcerated mouth and throat, and often copper colored splotches on different parts of the body. As the blood becomes more fully contaminated with the poison, pustular eruptions and sores break out on the flesh, and in extreme cases the nerves and bones are attacked and the finger nails drop off. Then the sufferers find themselves diseased from head to foot with this humiliating, vile and destructive poison. No other disease is so highly contagious; many an innocent person has been inoculated by handling the clothing or using the toilet articles of an infected person. There is but one certain, reliable cure for Contagious Blood Poison, and that is S. S. S. It attacks the disease in the right way by going down into the circulation, and neutralizing and forcing out every particle of the poison. It makes the blood pure and rich, tones up the system, and completely and permanently cures this disease. S. S. S. has cured thousands of cases of Contagious Blood Poison. If you are suffering with this debasing and destructive disease begin the use of S. S. S. and get the poison out of your blood before it permanently wrecks your health. We have a home treatment book on the disease which we will send free to all who wish it, and in addition our physicians will give without charge any medical advice needed. SUCCESSFUL MINISTERS.

The Foundations of Some That Have Become World Famous.

It is strange that so many of the world's greatest preachers have in their early ministry been singularly unsuccessful. This was true of G. Campbell Morgan, who was rejected by the Methodist church as a young man on account of his utter inability to preach. It was so with Thomas Yates, who was turned out of his college before his term was up, as hopeless, and had to go to Ireland as a lay assistant in the Methodist mission at Belfast. The first congregation to which Charles F. Aked preached in Leicestershire never understood him and never valued him, and they dismissed him. For some time he was without a church and found great difficulty in securing one. He came to Liverpool to seek the church near Birkenhead, but was unsuccessful. He was then offered Pembroke chapel, an apparently hopeless charge that was deserted of its congregation. On his first Sunday Mr. Aked had a congregation of sixty in a building holding 1,800. For three Sundays he preached to the passers-by in the open space before the church, and on the fourth Sunday, after inviting the hearers on the previous Sunday to come into the building to hear him on that day, he found that he had a thousand men before him. From that time his success was steady and uninterrupted. Previous to his coming to America he would preach at New Brighton in the summer to audiences of from 7,000 to 10,000 people.

The Cheapest Fuel is Coal—Not Gas

If you don't believe it you have but to make the test for yourself.

With a Buck's steel range—the greatest fuel saver made, you can cook an entire dinner consisting of several dishes, bake bread and heat fifty or more gallons of water—all with one fire. With gas you would require six or eight different fires as the case might be—and then the cooking would not be so well done—and the expense tremendously greater.

Let us show you many advantages of these wonderful stoves.

THE BOY WITH A RAT.

He Got Only $3 a Week, but He Drew a Crowd.

He was a grocer's boy about fourteen years old, and he stood in the door for two or three minutes watching the pedestrians hurrying up and down, while street cars clanged past and trucks and wagons crowded each other. He was working at $3 a week and unknown to the world, but a proud smile came to his face as he realized the power placed in his hands.

Stepping back a pace, he picked up a trap with a rat in it. He was a mere nobody, and yet he had caught a rat. Night after night he had baited for the rodent and trapped him at last. Only a boy, only a rat—but wait a minute.

The boy stepped out to the curbstone, with the trap in his hand. He was a nobody, and yet at that moment he was greater than an alderman.

"A rat! A rat! A rat!" shouted half a dozen voices in chorus, and faster than you could count 'em a hundred people gathered. With them were a dozen dogs; then 200 people, then 300—500.

Only a grocer's boy working at $3 a week and yet a greater man than the mayor of the city!

"Shake him out! Give the dogs a chance!"

The boy waited. He commanded the situation. He waited until passengers jumped off the street cars, until the trucks and wagons stopped, until men came running for half a mile around, until seven or eight hundred excited men, women, boys and girls were jamming and pushing and asking each other who had dropped dead.

Just nobody's boy, and yet some one rang in a fire alarm, some one sent in a call for the ambulance, some one telephoned for the police reserves. Then when a thousand eyes were upon him, when hundreds of men were asking who he was, when fifty cur dogs were raving about his feet, the boy opened the door of the trap, shook the rat out and made his way back to the grocery and calmly sold a woman a bar of soap for 7 cents.—Chicago News.

GOSSAMER THREADS

By BROUGHTON BRANDENBURG

Copyright, 1907, by Thomas H. McKee.

IT was "Die Walkure" night of the "Niebelungen Ring" series at the Metropolitan Opera House, four years ago, as I remember distinctly, that this unusual entanglement came to light. Rand and I were in the company of General and Mrs. Edward Blashfield, and were chatting in the box after the second act, when an usher came up behind Rand and said:

"Mr. Lawrence Rand? There is a gentleman in the next box who wishes to see you for a moment."

With an apology Rand left us, and almost immediately I heard the sharp click of a rubber band against the palm of his hand, a little innocent-appearing signal which we often used, and supposing that he wanted me, I too left the box and entered the next one.

With his chair hitched up close to the one in which sat Rand was a man of remarkable appearance. Of medium height and slender, with a dark olive skin, flashing black eyes and a wealth of straight, black hair, splendid teeth and extremely fine features, he was easily recognized as an Oriental of high caste. His forehead and certain facial lines indicated a fine mind and a delicate, romantic, sensitive nature. His age was about thirty-eight.

Rand was endeavoring to repress an excited outpouring of some narrative, evidently until I could hear it also.

"Mr. Duncan, this is the honorable Khan Nadjian, whom you will recall as the importer and expert in Persian rugs. His place is just around from the club. He has a difficult problem for us, and as he speaks Italian better than English, I need you badly. Otherwise, I should not have called you away from our friends."

So intent was the noble Persian on relieving himself of his burden of perplexity that he cut short his acknowledgment of the introduction and plunged into a veritable torrent of Italian, strongly flavored with the Neapolitan dialect. He was so wrought up that he was nearly frantic. Reducing his statement to important facts, in their proper proportion, the story was as follows:

For ten years he had occupied the second and third floors of a house in East Sixty-third street, sub-letting it from the owner, a Mrs. Terrence Malvern. Her husband was a mining engineer absent in foreign lands the greater portion of each year. At present Mrs. Malvern had been gone from the house for a period of four months, on a visit to a married daughter, leaving the establishment in charge of her brother, a middle-aged person named John Coughlan. He had been a clerk in a bank until he was thirty, but after a siege of typhoid had become a helpless, dependent sort of individual, likely to do the most childish and foolish things. Nothing criminal had ever been observed in his make-up, and he had never evinced any unusual cunning or curiosity.

The first floor of the house was occupied by a bachelor surgeon, Dr. Justin Huntley, a specialist in gunshot wounds. The doctor had been in the house five years when Nadjian took up his abode in it. There was an old colored maid-of-all-work who came above the first floor each morning to care for the apartments of the two bachelors. She never left the basement after ten o'clock each day, unless summoned, and Nadjian never left the house until after eleven.

For three months his apartments had been entered in his absence by some unknown visitor as regularly as he left the house, the unknown nearly always disturbing, very slightly, some of the small objects in his library, as if looking for papers among his private documents. Several times he had returned in fifteen minutes with the purpose of catching the intruder, only to find that the unknown had come and gone. There were but two means of entrance to the house, the basement door opening on the areaway at the street, and the door to the doctor's floor, approached by the steps from the street. There was a vacant lot on the east side of the house, and an air shaft ten feet wide on the west side, between the house and a towering apartment structure, which shut off access to the roof.

The skylight door was secured with a strong Yale lock, the key to which lay among many others in a locked drawer of Nadjian's desk. The back of the house was barred at all apertures with an iron trellis work.

For a week a trusted clerk from the rug store had seen no one coming or going from either of the front doors. Yet signs of visitation were apparent when Nadjian returned each day. It was proof conclusive, therefore, that either Dr. Huntley or John Coughlan were clandestinely endeavoring to get possession of something valuable which they knew, or imagined, Nadjian to have among his effects. There were many rare tapestries, pieces of Damascened plate, paintings on ivory, antique jewels and other articles, both large and small, of high virtu, yet nothing had ever been taken away.

"And now, you see, gentlemen," Nadjian concluded, "I have told you everything. I have absolutely nothing that either my dear friend, the doctor, or the miserable Coughlan could want that they have not had every opportunity for taking, but one or the other persists in coming to my rooms secretly. If Coughlan—poof! he is a slow fool, and I do not care. If Dr. Huntley, I am grieved; I am hurt, I am mortified to the depths. I should not want to live, for he is more to me than my brother. Such a friend as the heart of man could hope to find only in a million of these human wretches—so I will not give up my comrade—Mon Dieu, but I must know, or I shall go mad. I must know at once!"

Rand and I exchanged glances. Nadjian's sincerity and feeling were evident. On the face of things, the case was not important in the least, save as Nadjian's peace of mind depended on its solution, and as it presented a most alluring mystery to us. Before passing, I should add that Nadjian, having heard of Rand, had been on his track since five that afternoon, and had only caught up with him at the opera.

"If we returned home with you to-night, Khan Nadjian, we should reach your house after twelve. Where would John Coughlan be in the natural course of events?"

"In bed in the basement."

"And Dr. Huntley?"

"He always retires at eleven, unless we play at cards."

"Very well, with your permission, we will go home with you. Yes? Duncan, will you telephone to Tom Rahway to pack a suit case with our clothes for to-night and to-morrow, and take his post opposite Khan Nadjian's house, watching who comes and goes, and waiting our arrival."

Rand then begged Mrs. Blashfield's permission to have the Khan join our party, and after the opera we three drove to Sixty-third street. We found the house quite as Nadjian had told us, distinctly detached, with the two entrances. The entire front was illuminated by a street light directly opposite. In the shadow of the steel post lounged the huge, brawny figure of the Sioux student, the suit case at his feet. The block was deserted, save for him and us. Rand called him over, found no one had entered or left the house, and sent him directly away. The doctor's apartments and the basement were dark.

Within doors we saw that each floor had its hall, with four rooms to the floor, all opening on the halls. The doctor's rooms had wooden doors. The Khan's doorways were hung with jade and steel bead portieres.

He had no means of shutting off any apartment except his bedroom, in an alcove of which he had his bath. This chamber was done in an ancient Cingalese imitation of the roof of a house, with a parapet painted around the wall, an azure sky above it. In the domed ceiling, all in their proper places for the calendar day of the birth of Buddha, gleamed jewels of fitting sizes to represent the stars, and in the west shone a silver crescent moon. When a broad, low, blue lantern was lighted the effect was entrancing.

I give the detail of this room merely to convey an idea of the extraordinary character of the others. The front chamber of that floor was in the semblance of a bazaar in Tukestan. The dining-room was built-in with carved black woods to resemble the cabin of an ancient Chinese war-junk, such as Marco Polo saw. And so on through the entire two floors.

The door to the library was at the head of the first flight of stairs, and two doors opened, front and back, into the other rooms, the one to the rear being the bedroom described. The library was designed to represent the forest camp of a northern sheik, the trunks of the trees being bookcases, while the vistas in the walls were sliding panels with books behind them, and one corner was cut off by the front of a tent, through which one passed into the next room. The desk in the centre of the room was a huge sandstone rock, hollowed out to accommodate large drawer space, which opened up at the touch of a knob. It was one of the most marvelous pieces of mechanism I have ever seen. Grass mats with a long nap carried out the effect on the floor, and in one corner, as if supported on a rock and a fallen tree, was a bed roll of rich stuffs, making a surprisingly solid and comfortable couch.

At Rand's suggestion we moved about softly and talked in whispers, though I believe that the marvels of the illusion would have affected me so that in any event I should have behaved quite that way.

A HAND SHOT OUT AND SMOTHERED THE FIRE.

As every detail of the rooms was carefully adjusted by his own hands each day, the Khan knew instantly when a book had been moved a few inches, when a curtain had been displaced, or when a packet of papers had been lifted from where he left them.

"What cigarettes do you smoke?" asked Rand.

"Always Teofani. So does the doctor, when he does not smoke Murias cigars."

"Does Coughlan smoke a Greek Theopopulous? Here is the butt of one, still warm."

The Khan's eyes seemed about to start from his head. He could scarcely answer that he did not know what Coughlan smoked, but stood with his eyes fastened on the bit of cigarette, following Rand's gaze at the smoke still floating about the ceiling. One thing I had noticed, and, on calling Rand's attention to it, found that he was also aware of it. Every sound seemed to be easily heard from one floor to the next and in the halls, probably from some accidental acoustic cause. In answer to Rand's questions, the Persian said that signs of the unknown visitor were rarely seen on the top floor, and were most frequently to be observed on the lower floor, particularly in the library. He had deduced from this that, when Coughlan or the doctor ventured to invade his quarters they were careful to go to the top floor only when reasonably sure that the Khan would not return too soon for the invader to hear his key in the door and get down to the next floor before the Khan could trap him.

"Have you a spool of black silk thread?" inquired Rand.

The Khan said he had not.

Rand walked slowly through the rooms of the floor until his eyes lighted on a red silk cord supporting an ancient Tartar dagger.

"May I take that cord?" said he.

The Persian loosened the cord and gave it to him.

Rand led the way back to the library, and cutting a section three feet long from the cord, unrolled the twist and gave us each a strand.

"Let us sit down here under this strong light and carefully separate each thread of the smallest possible division. I want fifty threads of silk as nearly like a spider's film as I can get them."

For an hour we worked at the difficult, tedious task in silence. The threads then lay stretched on a sheet of blotting paper, clinging lightly to its fuzz.

"I hope you will understand me, Khan Nadjian, when I say that for perhaps some days I must have absolute control of these two floors, your movements inside the house, and, in fact, every detail of your establishment, if you wish me to solve this problem for you. Are you willing to undergo some probably severe inconveniences?"

The Persian vowed he was willing to endure torture, if need be.

"Very well, then," answered Rand. "Sit down at your desk and go over your papers and correspondence just as you usually do; in fact, as if you felt yourself perfectly safe from intrusion, while Mr. Duncan and I make a detailed survey of the other rooms. First, however, conduct Mr. Duncan to the skylight, which I noticed was reached by a closet stairway, and allow him to look at it carefully."

I knew Rand had some little plan which he was not willing that Nadjian—perhaps I also—should know.

We returned in about ten minutes and he was still sitting smoking, apparently just as we had left him. I observed, however, that almost all of the little quasi invisible threads of silk were gone from the blotting paper. There were ten, perhaps, left.

"Remember, work for the next half hour over your private papers, exactly as you would if you felt yourself in the most complete security. At the end of half an hour go to your room and retire. In the morning go out by the hall door. Do not enter this room on any mission. Remain at your store until you hear from me or from Mr. Duncan. Leave your papers carelessly on the desk. If you wish, Mr. Duncan will occupy the bedroom on the floor above, for I shall shortly leave the house. So, I shall bid you good-night. Now we will go upstairs, Duncan. Good-night, Khan Nadjian."

The Persian seemed somewhat bewildered and the least bit resentful of Rand's absolutism, but he sharply reined himself up, bade us a gracious good-night, and we went upstairs.

"Well, queer business, isn't it?" said I. "What do you think?"

"I am just going to think," said Rand, with an aggravating smile. "Will you examine the rooms from front to back, following our usual processes? Look for ravelings, ashes, cigarette butts, heel marks on rugs, et cetera. H'm! Well!"

He stooped, picked up some small black thing, very thin and slender. I believe he thought I saw what it was before he pocketed it, but I did not, and was already so nettled that I would not ask him. He lit a cigar and sat down by the back window while I went to my patient task. It was fully an hour before I had finished, and I had nothing to show for my search except a spot in the room nearest the head of the stairway, where there seemed to have been many cigar ashes dropped.

Rand led the way downstairs without a word, except:

"Please stand in the doorway until I have finished."

He took out his largest lens, turned on all the lights, and stepped about very carefully, examining the floor, the strange furniture, the trunks of the imitation trees and the sliding panels in the walls. He turned finally to the papers on the table, not to examine their contents, but to look very minutely at the arrangement. For five minutes he stood rooted in his place gazing at them, then, taking from his dress waistcoat pocket a little headache powder which I had seen him put there the evening before when we were dressing for dinner, he lifted it carefully in criss-cross lines over the papers. He then stroked the floor in a path to a certain tree, stroked the tree itself, and drew himself up to his full height with that tired, relaxed look on his face which I had often seen come there when he knew his day's work was done.

"Come now, Duncan," said he. "We are all right now. Wait till I stretch half of these remaining threads across these bead curtains to this entrance to the library from the hall. The others I shall give to you to place to-morrow morning after Nadjian has gone out. Fasten one across each of the doctor's doors, one across the door to the basement and the others across the stairways up to this landing. Wet the ends and they will cling to anything. In the morning I shall appear at the basement door as a plumber and keep the old servant below stairs. You remain in your room until you hear Nadjian go out. Wait two hours, then take your big lens, go over this room and down the halls and stairways and read the story you will find written in the threads. After that there is enough fruit and Scotch short-bread on Nadjian's sideboard for your breakfast."

Throwing his coat over his shoulders and putting his opera hat rakishly over one ear, he waved me good-night, and was gone noiselessly down the heavily carpeted stairs. I heard distinctly the slightest creak of the front door as he went out, his footsteps along the tiled corridor and the jar of the outer storm door, then silence reigned in the house of mystery.

I slept well, waking about nine o'clock, with that strange, confused sense which one has when opening one's eyes on new and unfamiliar surroundings. Going to my doorway, I could hear Nadjian stirring about in his bedroom, someone walking up and down on the doctor's floor, and, in the basement, a man's and a woman's voice engaged in some trivial discussion. As the male's voice was not that of Rand, the natural presumption was that it was Coughlan's. The acoustic properties of the house certainly were marvelous, but many of the old houses of New York are so built that one can hear everything from bottom to top, though not vice versa.

In about an hour, when nearly famished, I heard Nadjian leave his room, go down stairs and out. How I could wait the two hours, as instructed, tarry to make a careful survey, and then breakfast on the scanty fare from the sideboard, I did not know. Psychological effect made me ten times more hungry and miserable by the time eleven o'clock came, and I began to imagine I could detect various odors of cooking food from the basement. While sniffing one of these I heard the doctor's door open and close; followed by no footsteps, however; yet in a few seconds I knew positively that I smelled the odor of an Oriental cigarette wafted in from the hall. The odor continued, and I saw the smoke floating between me and the window. At last it either vanished or I became accustomed to it, for my mind reverted to my hunger and, one hour before I had been instructed to descend, I did so. I fully expected to encounter Rand's accusing eyes the instant I set foot outside the doorway, for I knew he was in the house as he had said he would be.

The threads in the hall at the head of the second stairs were carried away, but those on the dining-room doorway portieres remained undisturbed. I put my arm through, got a double-handful of fruit, and stood in the hallway munching it like a thieving schoolboy hiding in a closet.

Against the light I could see a film of smoke floating out of the library doorway. When I had quite satisfied my famished inner clamor, I moved silently and slowly along the hall and was startled to see that the silk films on the portieres had been disturbed.

I would examine the hall and stairway first. Everything had been carried away, and the thread across the front door of the doctor's apartments was gone. So was the thread at the head of the basement. I moved rapidly upstairs again, for I knew that some one from the lower part of the house had passed up the stairway and was smoking, or had been smoking a few minutes before, in the Persian's library. I stepped inside suddenly, fully expecting to come face to face with either Dr. Huntley or Coughlan. The room was empty, and, seemingly, just as we had left it the night before, only there was another Theopopulous butt in the tray, and as I touched my finger tip to it I found it was still warm.

I stood perfectly motionless for fully ten minutes, trying to think what my next move should be, when, suddenly, I saw one of the threads lying at my feet where the light struck it strongly. Looking more closely, I saw they were laid systematically about the floor.

A great feeling of relief rushed over me. Rand, thinking I had followed his bent the night before, had merely said, "read the story in the threads." I had thought only of those on the portieres and in the halls, and, like the stupid ass I have always believed myself to be, thrust into harness with the cleverest man alive, I had very nearly bungled the entire scheme.

Now I made another discovery. There were threads on the walls and the furniture, but none on the desk where the white background of the papers would show them up. The astute Rand!

I began my survey, moving around the room to the left, Where the threads were straight they had been undisturbed, and where disturbed or carried away, the mysterious visitor had passed. Rand had thus tracked Nadjian's movements in the room during our absence the night before, and the stroking he had done had been merely to once more straighten the threads.

I found nothing disturbed until I came to a certain tree. It had evidently been opened to examine the books within. From in front of it a pathway of disturbed strands extended directly to the Arab camp-stool before the desk. The lens showed that feet had dragged them toward the tree in approach and then looped parts of them the other way on the return. The portieres to the front had not been disturbed. No one had entered Nadjian's bedroom, or come from it, and, in fact, there was nothing that had been visited in the room except the desk and the tree mentioned, save the couch. No one had lain on it, however. A thrill ran through me as I saw that the disturbed thread track leading to it was dragged in one way only.

The man I was hunting had left the desk hurriedly, dropping the cigarette in the tray, had moved to the couch, and had not gone away. He must still be there. He was not on top of it. He must be under it.

Yet the side appeared to be a solid tree with no aperture, save one large knot hole. I had cornered my game, and did not know how to close in. I might easily drag him out, but what then? Suppose it should be Dr. Huntley instead of Coughlan? The Khan had been mystified merely because he did not wish to humiliate the doctor. By going a little slowly I might find out which it was without letting my man know that he had even been suspected, let alone neatly caught, by Rand's cunning devices. I was consumed with anxiety to go below and consult Rand, but that would give my game an opportunity to leave his hiding-place and appear in some explainable place, innocently engaged, when we came back. Perhaps it would be just as well to wait until Rand came up to see how matters stood, and then by one of our little signals prevent his making any remark that would inform our victim he was trapped.

However, it might be hours before Rand put in his appearance, and it was possible that he had left the house and would not return for two or three days, leaving me to shift as best I might. I knew from experience that he had no hesitation in doing this if it better served his end than to show me some consideration. If I remained in the room for hours then my man would certainly know he was caught, and might disclose himself dramatically.

I realized that I was in a fair way to make a very fine mess of things. Perhaps, after all, I was mistaken in my observations and the couch contained nothing. The rock at the end and the tree along the side certainly appeared to be entirely solid. There was one sure way of ascertaining. I would lie down on the couch, pretending to sleep or read, and by listening carefully I would be sure to detect signs of life beneath, if life was there.

Carefully making a careless noise with a newspaper taken from the file hung on a tree, I strode over to the couch, re-examining the silk threads, confirming my first observations, and stretched myself at full length on the bed roll. I took the tray with me to more minutely examine the cigarette stub.

For perhaps a half-hour I could not lie so still that the stir in the stuffing of the bed roll, the movements of my own body, and the sound of my own heart and breathing did not preclude any chance of my hearing similar sounds below. Perhaps a smoke would quiet me. I lit a cigarette, and by fixing my attention on it I grew very still and distinctly heard a slight stir below and the rapid breathing of some one undergoing suppressed excitement. I was right. My man was there.

Still, the problem was how to decide whether it was the doctor or Coughlan without leaving the room and giving him a chance to escape. If only Rand had appeared at that moment I could have signaled to him to see which of them was downstairs, and thus have made certain that it was the other who was under the couch.

Suddenly I had to make myself rigid to keep from starting to my feet. I had, while thinking deeply, dropped my lighted cigarette on the grass mat beside the couch. It had begun to smoulder, and out of the corner of my eye I caught a glimpse of a hand thrust out to hastily extinguish the incipient conflagration. Another cigarette, another fire, another appearance of the hand in self-preservation, and I would get a look at the hand. That would be enough.

Acting my part carelessly, I rattled my paper, tossed about, and missed fire on two matches as I lighted my cigarette. I enjoyed it for about five minutes, and then dropped it, with a red coal on the end, fairly in front of the knothole. As soon as the grass nap began to smoke a hand shot out and smothered the fire—a little hand bearing many jewels—the white, slender hand of a woman!

I had no trouble in lying still for some minutes, paralyzed by sheer amazement. Then my brain began to work. The whole hypothesis had been wrong—our whole hypothesis, no, Khan Nadjian's and mine, for though I had not the remotest idea what Rand's had been, I had every reason to be sure now, from the process he had pursued, that it did not coincide with that of the Persian. But, whatever the explanation of this affair, I was in a deeper quandary than I had been before I hit on the expedient of the burning cigarettes. I had as game for the chase an unknown woman to whose identity there had not been indicated the slightest clue in anything we had seen or that Nadjian had said. Doubtless Nadjian would not know who she was if I hauled her out and held her until he could be summoned. Again, he might be either guiltily or innocently involved in some plot or scandal which any precipitate action on my part might bring to a crisis that would be bad for him, something that we, as his employes, should not do. It would be better to allow her to leave her place undetected, as she would suppose, and tracing her movements by the threads, ascertain how and why she had entered the house. I was puckering my brows severely, and was just about to rise when a dirty, greasy person in a jumper, with a wrench and a pot of red lead in one hand, appeared in the doorway.

"Where is the bathroom on dis floor?" said he.

Only the quivering corner of the mouth made me certain it was Rand.

"Just beyond that door, my man," said I, indifferently.

Rand's eyes swept the place like lightning. He followed the thread trail to the couch instantly, saw the two little burned spots and the cigarette stubs opposite the knot hole. It puzzled him not more than ten seconds. I was helpless to convey any definite information. He thrust one hand inside his jumpers, held up something, his eyebrows raised in interrogation. What he held up I now recognized as the object he had picked up on the stairs the previous night, a very small, black hairpin. I nodded vigorously, and pointed underneath the couch, whereupon he was convulsed with silent laughter for so long a time that I threatened to throw a book at him.

At last he turned to me to lie quiet, went into the bathroom and remained about for a little while, came out and measured around the room with a pocket rule. I knew he really was reading the signs of the threads. Finally he went out in the hall and upstairs, where I could hear him for a time, then all sounds died away, and for a full half-hour I lay there, hot and cold with suspense, growing violently hungry once more and puzzling my poor head as to what this situation could mean.

At length I heard him coming down. He did not even look at me as he entered the room, but his eyes were shining with the light that I knew signified he was in the heat of the chase. He went directly to one of the imitation trees, slid back a panel in a lofty branch and took out some small pieces of well-worn paper, brought them to the desk, sat down, read them over with great care, using his most powerful lens for a final examination, then, turning about, said with great kindness and gentleness:

"Mr. Duncan, will you be so good as to rise from that divan, lift the side and assist Mademoiselle Melenon from beneath it? My dear child, please come out. It is no further use to attempt to conceal anything."

A soft sobbing broke out under the couch. After fumbling a moment with what I had supposed was the solid tree side, I found it was hinged at the top and swung out easily. The instant I opened it there rolled out and sprang to her feet a very angry and beautiful girl of a marked Greek type. There was no mistaking her nose and brow. She would have darted out the doorway, but Rand, with a long spring, intercepted her and gently forced her to a seat. Her tears dried instantly, and her eyes blazed defiance. She began some hot speech in broken English, but he interrupted her:

"Wait, wait, just a moment, mademoiselle, you are not to talk. I will tell you the story of this matter."

With tightened lips, clenched hands, and her splendid eyes changing in expression from fear to entreaty and then to proud anger, the girl sat silent and waiting while Rand turned over the papers on the desk. A step sounded on the stair. He covered the scraps with a folded newspaper just as Khan Nadjian, wonder written on his face, stepped into the room.

"You sent for me?" he asked of me, not recognizing Rand in the plumber at his desk.

"I telephoned half an hour ago for you to come at once. I was talking from this young lady's apartments," said Rand.

From her apartment, half an hour ago! How was that possible, when he had been in the house, as I knew positively ever since he came in when I lay on the couch?

"Who is this young lady?" asked the Khan, eyeing her with very evident admiration.

"Sit down and I will tell you. You can supply the final explanation. Her name is Ione Melenon. She is twenty years of age; was born in Beirut, the daughter of P. Melenon."

"Peregene Melenon's child!"

Rand disregarded Khan Nadjian's breathless exclamation.

"For three months you have watched Khan Nadjian leave his house and have then entered his rooms, always remaining as long as you wished or dared, searching his books and papers for the few old scraps of rough notes and maps which you knew he possessed and which contain the secret of wealthy turquoise mines near Nishapur, Persia."

The Khan leaned forward in his chair, as if about to leap on Rand.

"We would have worked more easily if he had confided these facts to us. I suspected he was holding something back and last night allowed him to point out the way to his own secret by tracking his steps on the floor. Then I found the papers, and here they are."

As Rand lifted the newspaper from over them, the girl moved as if to seize them, but with a quiet smile he dropped the paper back and put his elbow on it.

"You were hoping, Miss Melenon, that some day he would leave them out, but you were not careful about putting everything you disturbed back in its exact place. When you were trapped you hid until you could make your escape, under that couch where Mr. Duncan caught you. You were also very careless about cigarettes and ashes, for, when on the next floor listening, you dropped many ashes in one spot, and you left cigarette stubs at least twice too often. I cannot quite understand why you smoked so steadily in these rooms. You smoked very little in your own."

"Baycause when smooke is in they room and frawn door opan, smooke blows queeck."

"Ah, very clever. The upward draught, as well as your ears, warned you. That is good, isn't it, Duncan? It was the movement of the smoke that attracted my attention to your means of entrance. You see, Khan Nadjian, she has been on your track, has taken apartments on a level with your roof in the flathouse next spring you, has a light steel extension crane which she thrusts out from the top of her window after she has seen your departure from the house, and then she daringly swings over to your roof on a short rope. How did you get this key, which you left in the skylight lock?"

"I find out they locksmeeth of they houz and pay heem."

"You are a clever woman, Miss Melenon, and a brave one to cross that gap between this house and the next. I have just used your method twice in the last hour. Please forgive my disturbing your little things in your room to get the information I needed. Now, Khan Nadjian, the case is ended so far as Mr. Duncan and I are concerned. You may call in the police if you wish and we will give the needed testimony. I would like to hear, however, since you seem to know, who Peregene Melenon is, or was, for by the mourning frame on his picture in mademoiselle's rooms I take it he is dead."

"Yes, he is dead, almost as many years as this poor girl has been alive. She may have been born since he died before the mouths of the guns in Teheran. He was my best friend, though many years my senior. We were prisoners together after he had found those turquoise fields—prisoners on false charges, and I escaped. I did not know he had a child, though I found his wife's grave in Damascus ten years ago. I am an exile, but I will go back to the turquoise fields some day. No, Mr. Rand, there is no need for the police; this poor girl and I will settle this matter between ourselves."

And they did, for about a month later they were married, and not long since I saw a paragraph in the Engineering News saying that an English syndicate had paid a huge sum and would exploit the fields.

Next Week, MR. COSTIGAN'S EXPEDITIOUS LIFE

LAST OF FORT WAYNE'S FIRST STAFF OF CARRIERS

A. R. Walter Sole Survivor of Five Who First Delivered Mail.

Amos R. Walter, of this city, now deputy United States marshal, bears the distinction of being the sole survivor of the original staff of letter carriers who began the delivery of mail to Fort Wayne citizens thirty-four years ago. There were then a total of five carriers upon the force, and all save Mr. Walter have now passed from earth.

Free delivery of mail to Fort Wayne residents began on August 1, 1873, under the administration of Postmaster Jacob J. Kamm. Fort Wayne was then a city of from 17,000 to 18,000, and the five carriers named were A. R. Walter, Robert Jacobs, Adam Link, August Feustel and Henry S. Mensch. Four of them are dead, as are also Postmaster Kamm, Assistant Postmaster August Woodworth, Fred Drake, delivery clerk, and Charles Siemon, who had the stamp window at the postoffice. Col. W. H. McMullen, now chief bookkeeper at the Peltier undertaking establishment, was a clerk in the postoffice at that time. The first of the original carriers to resign was Mr. Jacobs, and he was succeeded by B. W. Skelton, at present judge of the city court.

Mr. Walter recalls with distinctness his first day's work as a letter carrier. It was on August 1, 1873, an intensely warm day, and he was required to make two deliveries over a territory that embraced all of the city west of Fairfield avenue and Fulton street, including what is now "Nebraska," and south to the city limits. He started early and the first delivery was completed at 1 p. m. Hastily eating dinner he started over the territory for the second time, and did not finish it until far after nightfall. "There were no civil service regulations in those days holding carriers down to eight hours a day," said Mr. Walter, "and many a time I was so late in completing the work that I would be compelled to call people to their doors with a lamp so that I could see to read the addresses upon the mail matter."

Mr. Walter remained a city letter carrier almost eight years, resigning in March, 1881.

CURTIS SWALLOWS ACID AND DIES FROM EFFECTS

Despondent Laborer Takes His Life Because of An Estrangment.

Harry J. Curtis swallowed about an ounce of carbolic acid at the home of his father, E. R. Curtis, 1514 Howell street at 7 o'clock last night and died in ten minutes afterward before medical attention could be obtained. Despondency on account of an estrangement from his wife who obtained a divorce last May, aggravated by excessive drinking are, in the opinion of Dr. J. E. Stults, the coroner, principal causes for the act.

Wednesday Curtis stated that he had obtained work on the McKinnie farm and with the assistance of his stepmother he packed his belongings and left saying he would be back in a week. He came back Saturday instead, and a short time before he died he passed through the house from the back into a front room where there was some company and informed his stepmother he had taken the acid. She did not understand him but followed him upstairs with a lamp and when she got up there she found he had taken the drug and in response to her question to ascertain why he swallowed it simply answered "Oh, because." He was 32 years of age and had been employed at one time in a shoe factory at Pearl and Harrison.

Mrs. Curtis called Dr. Calvin, but before he arrived the man was dead. He left no note or anything to indicate why he had taken his life but family trouble and drink are given as the causes by the coroner. The body will be shipped to Dunkirk, O., for burial.

Tomorrow morning we will add another small shipment of novelty suits to our great stock. Something new every few days. Watch our windows.

RAIL COMMISSION WILL TAKE A LOOK AT INTERURBAN

Messrs. Shane and Matthews to Inspect Wabash Valley.

Tomorrow Messrs. Shane and Matthews, of the Indiana railroad commission, will start at Fort Wayne on an inspection trip over the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley company's interurban system between this city and Lafayette. The trip is official in its nature and is made to see if the state's requirements for interurban railways have been complied with. "We are glad to have the commission members come," said General Manager Emmons this morning, "for we are proud of the system."

Today with Mr. Emmons, Superintendent Crawford and officials of the Clover Leaf, the commission representatives made a joint inspection of the new interlocking system just installed at Bluffton.

Rumors of a Change.

Official conformation is lacking of persistent rumors that J. B. Crawford, superintendent of transportation of the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley system, is to be called to a higher place with the big interurban syndicate. Mr. Crawford and Mr. Emmons returned yesterday from a conference with officials of the company in the east, and they say they are unable to understand how the rumors got into circulation.

THE DEATHS.

SCHULTZ.

Miss Anna Schultz, a well known and highly esteemed young woman who had been for six years an operator for the Home Telephone company, died at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon at her home, 819 Hugh street. Miss Schultz was 24 years of age, and death was due to tuberculosis.

Four months ago Miss Schultz was forced by failing health to relinquish her place at the switchboard, and she was given a place as collector for the telephone company. She continued to fail in health, however, and made a trip to Madison, Wis., in the hope of receiving benefit. It was unavailing, and later the young woman returned to her home in this city, where she declined steadily, though making a brave and courageous battle against the encroachments of disease. Miss Schultz was a devoted member of St. Paul's Lutheran church and possessed a very wide circle of friends to whom her death comes as a deep personal sorrow. Surviving relatives include her mother, five sisters and three brothers—Rose, Martha, Hilda, Della, Helen, Paul, Herman and Frederick Schultz.

Funeral services Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 from the residence and at 2 o'clock from St. Paul's Lutheran church, Rev. Jacob Miller officiating. Friends may view the remains until noon on Tuesday.

FREISTROFFER.

John Freistroffer, of Summit street, received a telegram Sunday informing him of the death of his son, Aloysius Friestroffer, 17 years of age, which occurred at Davenport, Iowa, where the lad has been employed in the steel works.

No particulars were given in the telegram and the father is unaware whether the death was from natural causes or was due to accident. Mr. Freistroffer and his son, Simon Friestroffer, left Sunday for Davenport.

O'DELIA.

Mary O'Delia, a foundling, died Sunday afternoon at St. Vincent's orphan asylum at the age of 8 months.

HOME FROM MEXICAN TRIP.

C. F. Bicknell and E. H. Merritt Arrive After a Month's Tour.

Messrs. C. F. Bicknell and E. H. Merritt arrived in the city Saturday evening on their return from more than a month spent in Mexico, where they made an inspection of some mining property in which Senator L. V. Clrey, of this city, is interested, and incidentally devoted some weeks to seeing the country presided over by President Diaz.

While the country is much disturbed over the uprising of the Yaqui Indians, the Fort Wayne party was fortunate and did not come upon any of the redskins, and the entire trip was a delightful one. Only vague rumors of the financial flurry in America had reached Mexico, and the business of that country is not at all disturbed by conditions here—in fact, little or no attention was paid to it.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, Nov. 13.—Dealings began in the stock market with activity at a boiling point and a very buoyant tone was the effect of the relief measures determined upon by the United States government. Gains throughout the list ranged up from a fraction to 1½ and in Great Northern preferred the rise was 4 points. Union Pacific 2¾, Canadian Pacific 3¼, United States Steel preferred 3½, St. Paul and New York Central 3, Reading and Northern Pacific 2¾, Southern Pacific and American Smelting 2⅝ and Atchison, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, General Electric and American Sugar 2 to 2½. There was an isolated decline of 2¾ in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie.

Except for a few belated advances, the prices made in the first five minutes of trading were the highest, the market thereafter reacting and the buying contracting. St. Paul fell back 1¾, Union Pacific and American Sugar 1½ and Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Reading, New York Central and United States Steel preferred 1 to 1¼. The copper stocks and Southern Pacific were conspicuously supported. The advances were General Electric 4, Illinois Central and American Smelting preferred 3, Missouri Pacific, Anaconda 2¾, Delaware & Hudson 2½ and Atchison preferred, Great Northern Ore Certificates, North American and Distillers Securities 2.

The shrinkage of the demand after the opening rush was the feature of the market and prices gradually receded. American Smelting first rose 3½, Tennessee Copper 3, and Northwestern 2. Sales of currency were reported at 16c premium and there was a violent fluctuation in foreign exchange as a result of treasury plan for the relief of the currency famine. Bonds were irregular.

The tone of the market became heavier and there were further recessions which brought St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper back to Saturday's close. Manhattan gained 4 and Pullman 2¾. Central of New Jersey declined 5 points.

The pressure on the market diminished and prices hardened slightly. Union Pacific rallied, but the general market was anywhere from ½ to 2½ below the early high prices. St. Paul preferred improved 5 points.

The market closed irregular and very dull. The upward movement was interrupted by a slight reaction, but was resumed again. Western Union and Peoples Gas rose 2, Consolidated Gas 4¼ and United States Realty 9. International Paper preferred declined 2 points.

Day's Happenings in the Industrial World

NEW ROSTER FOR THE NICKEL PLATE IS RUMORED

Watterson Will Resign and Some Fort Wayne Men Will be Promoted.

From Cleveland comes the report, which is said to be founded on facts, that William F. Watterson, superintendent of the eastern division of the Nickel Plate, has been induced by the offer of a big salary to take the superintendency of the Douglas Construction company and that his resignation has been tendered to General Manager A. W. Johnston and accepted. Following this change, the rumor says, will come the transfer of Supt. S. K. Blair from the western to the eastern division, the promotion of R. W. Mitchener to the office of superintendent of the western division and the promotion of D. H. Caldwell, chief dispatcher of the western division, to the office of superintendent of telegraph to succeed Mr. Mitchener, with headquarters in Cleveland. The Douglas Construction company has been awarded all of the important contracts by the Nickel Plate the past eight or ten years, included being the building of the second track at Chicago and in the vicinity of Cleveland the past two years. The offer of the position to Mr. Watterson is complimentary to his executive ability and indicates a power to bring good result with the facilities at hand. The official bulletins concerning these alleged changes have not been issued and nothing of an affirmative character could be learned here. The rumors were brought here by trainmen, who assert that "they are all the talk" at Cleveland, Conneaut and other places on the eastern division.

P. F. LANDY TO THE ERIE.

Well Known Gang Foreman Will Quit Pennsylvania Shops.

Philip F. Landy has tendered his resignation as foreman of one of the gangs in the Pennsylvania erecting shop to become effective on Thanksgiving day, the 28th inst. Mr. Landy has accepted the position of general round house foreman at Susquehanna, Pa., of the Erie at a salary greatly in advance of that afforded by his present position. There are two round houses at Suequehanna and both will be under his charge. Mr. Landy has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania company seventeen years. He commenced work as an apprentice in the Columbus shops of the Southwest system and soon after completing the apprenticeship term he was transferred to the Dennison shops, where he worked three years. Thence he went to Richmond, Ind., and worked a year, coming to Fort Wayne seven years ago to take the position as night foreman of the company's round house. Six years ago he became a gang foreman in the erecting shop, where he has made a good record. He assumes his new duties at Susquehanna December 1. Mrs. Landy and the children will remain in Fort Wayne until next spring, when they expect to move to Susquehanna also.

NEW TRAVELING FIREMAN.

J. H. Hanna, Who Becomes Engineer, Succeeded by J. A. Zeller.

According to present plans, John H. Hanna will be promoted from traveling fireman of the Western division of the Pennsylvania to engineer the latter part of the month and John A. Zeller will become traveling fireman. These changes will be nice promotions for the men affected by them. Mr. Hanna has been employed on the division ever since he left school, about seven years. Two years of this service was spent as a fireman in the freight department and five years was in the capacity of traveling fireman. Mr. Zeller has been firing on the road several years and for several months has been with Engineer McCarthy on the Pennsylvania Specials, Nos. 28 and 29, the eighteen-hour flyer He is considered one of the best firemen in the service. Some other promotions booked for the near future are C. B. Whitman, William Eaton, A. R. Downing, C. Rarick, C. D. Wingert and M J. Reilly who will pass from the scoop and pick to the throttle They are now in the hands of the trainmaster for final examination.

THEIR SIXTH BALL.

G. I. A. to B. L. E. Arrange a Holiday Entertainment.

The Grand International Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which has given a number of very pleasant social affairs in the city, announces the date of its annual dance and pedro party. It will be held at Muiqueen's on Friday evening, December 27, holiday week, and the committee of arrangements will endeavor to make this even more enjoyable than the previous similar events. The pedro party is a new feature, gotten up for the many people who do care to dance.

CONDUCTOR AUER RECOVERING.

Conductor Charles Auer, of the Pennsylvania, who was struck with a stove poker and received a cut above the left eye, was out today and paid a visit to the depot and offices. Mr. Auer is of the opinion that the sight of the eye will not be permanently injured though the ball was forced from the socket by the force of the blow. The towerman who delivered the blow is still in jail, awaiting a hearing. The reader will recall the fact that Mr. Auer found the towerman asleep and when he was aroused from his slumbers, he grabbed the poker and struck the conductor in a fit of rage.

ON EIGHT HOUR SCHEDULE.

The Wabash shopmen, who have been working on a nine hour work day scedule for several weeks, were put upon an eight hour work day schedule this morning. They will work eight hours each the first five days of the week and five hours on Saturday, making a total of forty-five hours per week. There is no lack of work in the shop and the present schedule may be changed to give the men more time in a week or two.

MARTIN CRAWFORD RECOVERS.

Martin Crawford, who was taken seriously ill last May and has been unable to work since, resumed work this morning, though in a different capacity, at the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop. He was given the job of sweeper, a position less arduous than that of helper in one of the forging gangs. Mr. Crawford is one of the oldest men in point of service at the shops, having worked there many years.

EYE PIERCED BY SLIVER.

Ed Slater, a boilermaker at the Wabash shops, had one of his eyes painfully injured at 8 o'clock this morning by a sliver of steel, which pierced the ball. Fortunately the iris escaped and the sight will not be permanently injured. Dr. C. F. Kaadt attended the sufferer.

Conductor Thomas Hayes, of the Nickel Plate, who caught a fourteen-pound pickerel a week ago, caught one yesterday that weighed five pounds, despite the fact that a strip of ice four feet wide extended along the water's edge where he was fishing.

Harry Frost, of the Wabash freight office, entertained Thomas Sullivan, a bill clerk in the Wabash offices at Huntington, over Sunday. Another visitor from Huntington and an employe of the Wabash company was Albert Hoffman.

CURRENCY MEASURE BY CONGRESS IS CERTAINTY

Probability of Relief by Legislation Believed to be Assured.

Washington, Nov. 18.—There are a few members of either house of congress who deal directly with financial legislation in the city that it is impossible to make any definite prediction as to what course financial legislation will take at the approaching session. All who are here, however, agree that the conditions are such that something must be done and the preponderance of opinion favors the view that relief legislation will be more prompt than has heretofore been predicted. There are various opinions as to the course that should be taken, some favoring the asset system, under which the banks would be allowed to use their property as the basis of credit, and others the bond system, under which the bank issue could be enlarged only upon securities such as municipal bonds with the requirement that they should be approved by the secretary of the treasury. The general idea seems to be that the margin of flexibility should not extend beyond 25 per cent of a bank's capital and that in any event the enlarged issue should be so heavily taxed as to drive it back when the emergency is passed.

Elements Are in Accord.

One reason for believing that there will be comparatively little difficulty in reaching an agreement on some basis is found in the fact that the so-called conservative element in the republican party is in complete accord with the administration in the opinion that some form of relief is absolutely necessary in the present emergency, to say nothing of possible future conditions of the same character. The only practical difficulty which presents itself at this time is an agreement on the form of legislation. At the same time it is not expected that anything will be accomplished without much discussion, especially in the senate, where there is unlimited debate and where there are many opinions as to what should be done. There will also be found there some disposition to criticise the present conditions.

There will also probably be some political discussion. It is not believed, however, that the democrats will offer any stubborn opposition, but will rather content themselves in stating their position and throwing the responsibility for action on the party in power.

That the action of the administration in coming so vigorously to the relief of the financial situation will be more than ample in the direction desired was the universal comment of callers at the white house today. Senator Warren, of Wyoming, said that the action taken was exactly what was needed. "The people at large will now realie that there was no cause for the panic and will stop hoarding their money," he added. "They will return to the savings banks their deposits and business of the country will return to its normal condition. Business already was improving. Now it will go right ahead."

Relief Should Be Immediate.

"The relief ought to be almost immediate," was the comment of Representative Needham, of California. "I believe congress will take up the matter of currency legislation at once with a view to some accomplishment which will make the present situation impossible of recurrence."

Senator Warner, of Missouri, believed that the bankers will take the canal bonds in a hurry. "They have complained of the lack of money and made that an excuse to tighten up all over the country. Now I do not see what excuse they can have for not loosening up."

Treasury officials and others most conversant with national finances and the currency conditions throughout the country are almost a unit in the opinion that Secretary Cortelyou's announcement that he would issue $100,000,000 in treasury certificates, and $50,000,000 in Panama bonds is a complete solution of the present money problem.

Telegrams received today at the treasury department from leading financiers in the great money centers indicate that this view is general and the opinion is expressed that a very large proportion of the money which has been withdrawn by timid depositors will now be speedily replaced in the banks and nominal conditions be reached, so far as an adequate money supply is concerned.

CATTLE ALMOST CREMATED

In Forest Fire, Are Rescued After Trying Experience.

Fire, which is believed to have been started by hunters, in a pasture on the Glendale farm, three and one-half miles west of the city, Saturday night, imperiled the lives of a herd of some sixty cattle, and but for the promptness of Messrs. S. D. Ormsby and Bert Gandy, of the real estate firm of O. Gandy & Co., who responded to a call, which conveyed the information that a prairie fire was in progress, would have undoubtedly been cremated.

When they arrived at the scene, they found the entire pasture, which contained the cattle, that were rushing to and fro or huddled together bellowing in terror, surrounded by flames. After a great deal of hard labor and when almost ready to drop from exhaustion and the heat of the flames, they succeeded in driving the maddened animals to a place of safety, but not before a number of them had been badly singed and the rescuers had a number of narrow escapes from being burned.

Owing to the dry weather which has made the forests and pastures dry as tinder, a number of fires have raged about Fort Wayne, few of them, however, gaining much headway before being discovered and distinguished.

A forest fire which started in a bit of woods, five squares east of Walton avenue, and to the south of the Pennsylvania tracks, started to creep dangerously near a number of dwellings in that vicinity, and the fire department was asked to hold itself in readiness to assist in extinguishing the flames, but people of the neighborhood, by dint of hard labor, succeeded in putting out the fire unaided. The origin of the fire is unknown.

CHOOSE INTELLIGENTLY

In making choice of a bank that shall become the depository of your funds and the medium for disbursing them, study well its elements of strength. Strong safes and automatic locks are incidental necessities, but it is more important that the men who manage the bank shall be strong men free from the taint of speculation and worthy of confidence. Choose a bank that seeks to prosper and makes loans carefully. These are points of merit we claim as a basis for your confidence.

Hello, 174 and 349.
Montgomery and Monroe Streets.

It's a Matter of Pride

with us that no flour in the land shall excel the "Silver Dollar" nor "Hungarian Process" flour. It's a matter of business that these flours once tried means repetition and constant use. The demand for these flours is increasing because our home people are advocates of patronising home industries and these are home milled flours. At all grocers.
